REPEAL HALF WON, SOUTH BOLTS

Near-Riot Marks Umpire's Ruling Against Bucs

SUCCOP PARDON ARGUED BEFORE BOARD

Today

The South Goes Wet. This Lady Drinks Wine. Snake Venom Stops Cancer. A Deadly Rat Army.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THOSE THAT hoped the Southern states would keep prohibition in the Constitution were disappointed yesterday afternoon. First reports from Arkansas showed a vote was 44 to against prohibition, while from Alabama it was 52 to 7. Some decided change might come, but it did not seem likely.

NEWS THAT will puzzle sincere prohibitionists comes from France, where Madame Anne Pire, who lives in the wine-producing Macon region, has just celebrated her one hundred and third birthday.

Mother of nine children, she attributes her long life, good health and ability to read without glasses, to the fact that every day of her life since childhood she has drunk the wine produced by her countryside.

There is, of course, no 3.2 wine in existence. That imaginary wine was created by an intellectual Congress, that knows more about whisky than about wine.

The French, as a matter of fact, drink their wine much weaker than 3.2, diluting ordinary wine with a great deal of water.

IN PARIS, Dr. Calmette, scientist of the Pasteur Institute, reports the growth of cancer in a white rat stopped by injecting venom from a cobra.

Cancer in the white rat succumbed after twelve injections of venom, ten of which, given all at once, would have caused death. This cancer treatment was discovered by Dr. Adolph Monae-Lesser, of New York.

ONE POISON offsets another. Salvarsan treatment, which conquers one of the worst blood diseases, involves injecting arsenic into the tissues, enough to kill the germs, not enough to kill the patient. Malaria germs are used successfully to cure cases of paresis.

Someone will find a remedy fatal to cancer growth, but not fatal to the cancer victims.

EVERY POSSIBLE misfortune appears to attack the unfortunate Chinese. Now a frightful plague of rats sweeps the southern part of the province of Anhwei, in East Central China.

The rats have polluted the water supply and threaten famine, while natives appeal for outside help, unable to fight the swarms of vermin.

Even this government might be interested, for a rat plague means other plagues, such as Asiatic cholera, and such things sometimes travel far, and rapidly.

HOW GRATEFUL Great Britain would be for some of the oil wealth that this nation pours out and squanders so carelessly. To make the British army and navy independent of foreign gasoline supplies, Prime Minister MacDonald announces an 8 per cent preference on distillates (substitute for gasoline), produced from British coal, in the next ten years.

In consequence, the British company, "Imperial Chemicals," will invest $35,000,000 in a plant to extract distillates from coal.

This will mean using about a million tons of British coal a year, and putting 7,000 idle miners to work.

"COAL GASOLINE" can be produced for fourteen cents a gallon. Foreign gasoline is laid down in British ports at four cents a gallon, but war might stop delivery.

Intelligent Standard Oil of New Jersey, looking far ahead, owns in America the process that Britain uses to extract the coal distillates.

WHILE THE United States wonders whether it can afford to build an airship to replace the Akron, Germans are building a new dirigible twice the size of their Graf Zeppelin.

At the same time the Graf Zeppelin is making regular trips between Germany and Brazil, carrying passengers and mails profitably.

The new German dirigible will carry helium gas instead of oxygen, the latter used only for balancing the ship. A smoking room will be provided for passengers, which could not safely be done, hitherto.

Individuals have a great deal of initiative and energy in the United States, but until President Roosevelt came in, the American government showed little of either. It watchfully waited—and look what happened.

A "LETTER to the editor" suggests a whipping post to diminish crime. Another letter says the whipping post is torture, which it is, and defies No. 1 to mention "any incident in history" where whipping has lessened crime.

Human decency should forbid its use, but the whipping post does discourage crime. When a plague of garrotting broke out in London, one man stepping behind a pedestrian, choking him, while the other robbed him, judges decided to try the lash. The moment a man was convicted he was tied up and lashed. Garrotting died out instantly.

IN SAN FRANCISCO citizens formed a vigilance committee, after a crime wave long ago, hung a few criminals to conspicuous lamp posts where others could see them. The others left town. Hanging seems to be the American remedy, and it might come back on a considerable scale if the country should tire of the kidnaping industry.

WILEY POST, American flier, was ahead of his own record around the world yesterday by sixteen hours. If his "Winnie Mae" stands up, and if the weather is not too bad, he will set a new record around the world.

REPEAL HALF WON; SOUTH BOLTS DRYS

Arkansas and Alabama Bring Total of States to 18

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The drive for repeal of national prohibition reached the halfway mark today as the votes of Alabama and Arkansas rolled up a total of 18 states ratifying the repeal amendment to the Constitution.

The results in these two Southern states were a distinct victory for the administration, since President Roosevelt made a personal appeal to the Democratic South to ratify the amendment. It marked the first time the Solid South had broken away from the prohibition cause on a direct vote.

Repeal leaders were jubilant. They predicted a complete victory by Christmas, since the repealing amendment must be ratified by only 18 more states. Two more states vote this week, Tennessee on Thursday and Oregon on Friday. The repealists predicted victories in both states.

DRY LEADERS SILENT

Dry leaders were strangely silent. They declined to comment on the outcome.

With Alabama and Arkansas rolling up wet majorities, the repeal issue has been passed upon by voters representing 52,721,592 of the nation's 120,000,000 population. The other states ratifying the repealing amendment were California, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Two more states vote in August, Texas on August 26 and

FORBES FIELD, July 19.—One of the wildest scenes in the history of Forbes Field took place here this afternoon as the Pittsburgh Pirates and the New York Giants opened a six-game engagement with a doubleheader.

Umpire Barr's decision on a line drive caught by Freddie Lindstrom, of the Pirates, was reversed by Umpire Moran, giving the Giants a run in the fourth inning.

The dispute that followed lasted more than 15 minutes before order could be restored.

Lindy had made a shoe-string catch of a liner off the bat of Fred Fitzsimmons to prevent a score and retire the side.

Barr ruled the catch good, but Moran reversed the ruling when the Giants protested.

Larry French was on the mound for the Pirates.

The Goose That Lays The Golden Egg

To the Editor of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph:

THE editorial which you submit for my judgment contains the following notable paragraphs:

"In the emerging period of enlarged trade volume, business management will come into its own again.

"Modern business executives who use the methods of applied science will stand out from the rest even more conspicuously than in the past.

"The new competition will no longer be in the anti-social realm of sweating labor, but rather in inspiring well-paid workers to become MORE PRODUCTIVE THAN THE AVERAGE.

"Experience shows that of four ditch diggers, each will throw up unequal amounts of dirt during a day's toil.

"The efficient managers, whose golden era appears to be looming, will not only SELECT ABLER APPLICANTS but will also, through inspiriting leadership, elevate the productivity of members of their staff.

"This influence will not only permeate the manual workers but also the intellectual personnel.

"If the philosophy of the new act is impartially carried into effect, the inefficient will either be crowded out of business or forced radically to improve their methods."

THIS IDEALISTIC editorial is valuable from one viewpoint, but is not based on a very wide experience with organized labor.

The effort of most organizers of labor is not only to get the most pay, but to give the least work.

The whole system of union rules, moreover, is based on the effort not only to limit labor but to limit productivity.

The quota of production is based on the capacity of the least skillful members of the union.

The methods of the union organizers result not merely in increasing compensation but in disproportionately increasing COSTS.

Union rules compel the employment of an unnecessarily large number of men on most jobs. They compel the retention of the less competent.

They tend to remove the control of the working force from the authority of your "business executives."

How can manufacturers pay high wages and allow short hours and still be compelled to limit production to the capacity of the most incompetent workmen, and to employ larger forces than are needed on any job, and to be unable to apply methods of efficiency because of the obstructive tactics of the unions?

REMEMBER, this memorandum is being written by a man who has supported union labor all his life, and who has written for over 40 years that prosperity is based on the good wages which create purchasing power among the mass of the community.

I always have been and always will be in favor of organized labor.

I support the benefits of unionism—but oppose its abuses.

Union rules will have to be modified if the New Deal is to go into successful operation.

No manufacturer can possibly limit production,

CONVICTION ON BIAS CHARGED

Lawyer Says Jury in Allegheny Would Have Freed Him

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, July 19.—Col. Bertram L. Succop, former Director of Pittsburgh's Department of Supplies, would never have been convicted had he been tried in Allegheny county, his attorney, E. L. Kearns, declared today in arguing before the Board of Pardons for the release of Succop, who has served five months of a one-year sentence.

The embracery charges which preceded the trials of Succop and Mayor Charles H. Kline, in Butler county were responsible for the adverse verdict, Kearns added.

Kline secured a change of venue from Allegheny to Butler when he and Succop were indicted.

'INFLUENCE' SEEN

Succop was never connected with attempted jury-fixing, Kearns said, but the jury subsequently picked was influenced against him because he and the Former Mayor were tried jointly.

Kearns, reviewing the counts on which Succop was convicted, was halted by Attorney General William A. Schnader with the question:

"Isn't it your feeling that if anybody served a jail sentence in this case it should not have been Col. Succop?"

Kearns answered:

"I cannot say that truthfully, because Mayor Kline did not interfere in any of these cases. It might help if I appealed to answer your question another way, but I can't do it."

Secretary of the Commonwealth Beamish asked:

"Isn't this just another story of the way graft is handed out in American cities, a violation of the ordinances in the interest of graft?"

Kearns replied:

"There never was a hint of graft, nor of knowledge of graft. My client was tried on atmosphere and not on evidence."

PRESENTS PETITIONS

The trial jury, Kearns declared, had said they were forced to return a conviction in order to live in Butler County.

Kearns presented 14 petitions signed by 3,600 names, asking that Succop be freed. Among the individual signers were County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, Senator Frank J. Harris and James M. Magee, a Pinchot appointee to the State Securities Commission.

Practically every veterans' organization in Allegheny County was represented on the petitions, Succop having been a veteran of the Twenty-eighth Division with an excellent war record.

NEWSIES TALK PEACE TERMS

Indications that the two-day newsie "strike" was waning were seen today after a conference of about a hundred boys with representatives of the newspapers, Mayor Herron acting as pacificator.

Yielding to the Mayor's plea, the boys at the meeting agreed to go back to work pending result of a conference. Later they quit selling while a meeting of 12 newsboys with representatives of the newspapers with the Mayor presiding was in progress. There was no repetition downtown of yesterday's destruction of papers.

Meanwhile, city, county, state and federal authorities organized in determined fashion, co-ordinated methods to prevent and punish occurrences similar to those of yesterday, when gangs of youths pulled bundles of newspapers from trucks and destroyed them.

The gangs were made up partly of small boys, some newsies, and many older youths, some of whom were recognized as being connected with such organizations as the KIDNAPED BOY HUNTED BY U. S.

Kidnaped by a man believed to be demented, Jack Woods, 15, of 18 Forbes terrace, Squirrel Hill, was sought today by federal, state and local authorities in four eastern states.

United States Department of Justice agents joined the search as hours passed with no word concering the boy except a brief telegram that only served to confuse his mother, Mrs. Maude E. Woods.

The federal officers were questioning the missing youth's companion, who narrowly escaped the Woods boy's fate.

The kidnaper was speeding east with the boy long before the abduction became known. Mrs. Woods learned her son had been stolen when Jack's playmate, Floyd McClintock, 14, of 5707 Forbes street, returned home at 7:30 o'clock last night after escaping from the kidnaper's car

The total tonnage last month was 2,507,201, as compared with 1,109,403 tons in June, 1932. A total of 1,836,536 tons of coal was shipped on the three rivers.

SOUTHAMPTON, England, July 19.—(AP.)—J. P. Morgan, arriving here today from New York, said that it was likely he would meet many British financiers on his trip here, including Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, but no political significance would be attached to any of his talks.

Mr. Morgan declined to discuss world affairs or to make any comment on the recent inquiry upon his banking house at Washington.

Pittsburgh Film Comic, Frank McHugh to Wed

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—(AP.)—Application for a license to marry was filed here yesterday by Frank Curry McHugh, film and stage comedian, and Dorothy Spencer McIsaacs, of Hollywood, daughter of Ira N. Spencer, manufacturer and inventor, of Hartford, Conn.

It will be his first and her second marriage. He gave his age as 35 and she hers as 28.

McHugh said he was busy making a picture and the wedding would have to wait a week or 10 days.

Frank McHugh comes from a family of Pittsburgh actors and has appeared in numerous Broadway and London successes.

His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Ed McHugh, were members of the old Harry Davis Stock Company.

A brother, Ed McHugh, Jr., is stage manager for Ethel Barrymore; a sister, Katherine, appeared in Pittsburgh a few months ago, and another brother, Matt, is in Hollywood with Frank, appearing in comedy roles.

Frank attended old St. Patrick's school here before going on the stage, and later lived with his family for a time in Ambridge.

He has been in Hollywood for two years, during which time he has scored notable successes in numerous pictures, including "Blessed Event," in which he played the role of a cabaret press agent, and Dick Powell, another Pittsburgh movie favorite, that of a crooner; and "Private Jones," featuring Lee Tracy, in which McHugh played the part of the army cook.

David Barricades Self in Temple As Aimee Hurries to End Squabble

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—(AP.)—David L. Hutton's divorce action today developed into a squabble over occupancy of the parsonage at Angelus Temple, the evangelistic edifice of Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton.

Open hostilities were initiated by the husband of the evangelist when he ordered a temple guard to barricade himself in the parsonage and defy any and all members of the congregation or its leaders to enter.

The guard, William B. Levins, discharged by Miss Harriet Jordan, acting business manager of the Temple, followed instructions.

Hutton, whose divorce complaint against the evangelist was filed in Superior Court Monday, and Miss Jordan are not on speaking terms, largely because of a remark attributed to her by the portly baritone to the effect that he, Hutton, was "knifing a sick woman in the back" by filing for divorce.

Levins was discharged immediately after Miss Jordan announced there would be a "house cleaning" at the temple incident to the divorce action. Hutton explained his orders to Levins by saying there were many articles of value in the parsonage belonging to him and his wife, and he was going to make sure they were not molested pending her return from Europe.

Aimee's Love Letters To Hutton Revealed —See Page 3.

Levins told Hutton he had thwarted one attempt by temple workers to force their way into the parsonage.

From mid-Atlantic, en route home from Paris where she underwent an operation, the evangelist pleaded with the baritone singer to postpone the divorce action until she was physically able to face the ordeal.

Addressed to "David, precious husband," the message said in part:

"Shock was terrific following operation. I need you so. Postpone plans. Listen to nobody. Oh, dearest, come and get me."

Hutton commented:

"I am not in a position to make any direct reply to Mrs. Hutton. The case is in California courts. Her conduct after she arrives here may change our attitude, but our actions cannot be altered."

The temple itself provided little balm for Hutton's temper by its criticism of his divorce action, and the singer informed newsmen that he was just about to abandon a gentlemanly attitude in his dealings with the edifice. He said, in fact, that he would start talking and "blow the lid off Angelus Temple unless the crowd down there lays off."

WESTINGHOUSE OFFICIAL OFFERS 36-HOUR WEEK CODE

MINIMUM WAGE FOR ELECTRIC PLANTS SET

35-Cent Hourly Rate Proposed by Trittle

WASHINGTON, July 19.—(AP.)—Electrical manufacturers presented to the Recovery Administration today a code of fair competition and said they realized thoroughly "the importance of co-operation between government and industry" in achieving an economic uplift.

The code was submitted at a public hearing presided over by William H. Allen, deputy administrator.

TRITLE OFFERS CODE

J. S. Tritle, president of the national Electrical Manufacturers Association and vice president of the Westinghouse Company, presented the code on behalf of the association.

Its chief provisions include a 35-cents-an-hour minimum wage for factory labor, a $14 a week for other employes, a 36-hour week for the factory workers and a 40-hour week for others.

Electrical manufacturers told the Recovery Administration that application of their proposed code would restore the full 1929 employment level upon a return of only 60 per cent of that year's production.

Tritle said the industry "realizes thoroughly the advisability of co-ordinated efforts between government and industry in order that we may have prosperity again in full measure by the stabilization of industry."

At the hearing also was Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Company.

Roosevelt Aides Push Blanket Code Program

WASHINGTON, July 19.—(AP.)—Strategists of the Roosevelt recovery campaign sought common ground in conference today on setting up a minimum wage and maximum work week standard for the entire country, with indications of an early announcement.

Preliminaries to promulgation of specific codes were hastened, meanwhile.

Secretary Roper presided over the meeting of the Industrial Board, comprised of various cabinet members and their assistants.

What extent to go on the proposed voluntary national code, which would be aimed to enhance purchasing power until such a time as many individual codes can be completed, was the question.

Meanwhile, Hugh S. Johnson—administrator of the law—was considering extensive changes in the publicity machinery of his organization.

Expected soon was announcement that the entire unit would be put under direction of Charles F. Horner, who organized speaking campaigns for the wartime Liberty Loan drive and has been framing plans for a similar campaign to stir public enthusiasm in support of the "blanket code" proposition.

Johnson has been highly dissatisfied with his press setup, considering it ineffective.

Reports, not confirmed, were that he was seeking the services of Charles Michaelson, who conducted publicity for the Democratic National Committee between 1928 and the last election. His energetic work was credited with much of the party success.

COAL GROUPS FAIL TO AGREE

WASHINGTON, July 19.—(AP.)—Northern and Southern bituminous coal producers representing well over half of the nation's total annual tonnage went through the second day of their conferences yesterday without agreeing on a competitive code.

Their aim was to hand Hugh S. Johnson, the Industrial Recovery Administrator, a single trade agreement.

So far, they have been unable to decide on what spread should be allowed between northern and southern wages.

Reports of an agreement on a maximum work week of 40 hours brought neither confirmation nor denial.

J. Edgar Masters, of Charleroi, Pa., was re-elected grand secretary.

LABOR PRESSES UNION DRIVE

Labor leaders are continuing their efforts toward the organization of industrial rather than company unions under the Industrial Recovery Act.

A large mass meeting, called by the Committee for Industrial Organization of Westmoreland County, which includes heads of unions and members of the Socialist party, was held last night in Bames street, New Kensington.

Among the speakers was Clara Lehman, 16, who made a plea for young workers to organize. Other speakers were Charles Swift, of the Patternmakers' Union; Ralph Schmidt, of the Boilermakers' organization, and John W. Slayton, of the Socialist party. M. Mallinger presided.

Furniture Makers Meeting on Code

NEW YORK, July 19.—(AP.)—A committee of 30, representing the National Association of Furniture Manufacturers, met here today to consider a code of fair competition for the industry.

PARLEY FAVORS MORE SILVER

LONDON, July 19.—(AP.)—The increased use of silver in subsidiary coinage was agreed upon by the World Economic Conference subcommittee on silver today in adopting a part of Senator Key Pittman's resolution.

Other important features of the American silver problem were held over for future action. A proposal to regulate the world output of the metal will await decisions by a conference of producers and exporters.

A third important feature of the Pittman plan, regarding the use of silver as a part of central banks' metal coverage, also failed to produce definite results, as the subcommittee recommended that action be delayed pending further discussions.

STRIKE ON P. O. JOB CONTINUES

Within the cracked walls of the new postoffice, all was silent again today.

Reports from Washington yesterday had intimated the union workers, who quit July 12, would be back on the job today.

Disputed issues, according to Department of Labor officials, had been arbitrated.

But the word from Washington, which would have started the men back to work, failed to arrive, according to Maj. Robert A. Greenfield, United States engineer, supervising construction.

The Goose That Lays The Golden Egg increase the cost of production, and still make enough profit to pay high wages and allow short hours.

The prices of the products would be prohibitive, and no community would have sufficient purchasing power under such conditions to buy freely enough to create prosperity.

The New Deal can only be made effective through reasonable co-operation between employers and employes, through the effort to supply good work in return for good wages, and through increased productivity as an offset to increased cost of production.

"Sweating" employers is as unwise as "sweating" labor; and extortion FROM employers is as dangerous as oppression BY employers.

Either one kills the goose that lays the golden egg.

THE ONLY sound policy is to keep the goose alive by mutual toleration and co-operation: get as many eggs as possible out of the obliging bird by scientific and efficient methods, and divide the output fairly.

If the government uses the immense powers of its Industrial Recovery Act without the greatest care and fairness and judgment, it is likely to revolutionize industry by standing it on its head.

The government should use its powers without bias or preconceived prejudice, and not for the advantage of one faction or another, BUT IN THE BEST INTERESTS OF INDUSTRY AS A WHOLE, AND THE COMMUNITY IN GENERAL.

With sincere co-operation between employers and employes, and with the government as arbitrator, and with the natural and inevitable improvement in the mechanics of production, higher wages CAN be paid, shorter hours CAN be given, productivity CAN be increased, and the prices of products CAN be reduced to the consumer.

That is the ideal and possible goal.

Will it be attained?

GORDON IN TILT WITH PROBERS OVER BANKS

Not 'Sweatshop Quiz' Chairman Warns Belligerents

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, July 19.—Another sharp exchange between Secretary of Banking William D. Gordon and Senator Harry Shapiro, Philadelphia, today interrupted a dreary recounting of figures before the legislative committee investigating the administration of closed banks. Similar exchanges marked former hearings of the committee.

After several pointed questions shot by Shapiro, Secretary Gordon asked:

"Whom are you gunning for?"

Shapiro retorted:

"I am not gunning for anyone and I won't permit you to make such a charge."

A heated exchange between the two continued until Representative Elwood J. Turner, Delaware, rapped for order and briskly observed:

"This is not a sweatshop hearing."

REPORTS QUESTIONED

After peace had been restored Dr. Gordon and Senator Shapiro continued a less heated controversy about the accuracy of reports submitted by the department of banking for the committee.

The Philadelphia senator criticized what he said was a slow process of liquidation of closed banks and the few payments made to depositors. He cited the Dime Bank & Trust Company of Wilkes-Barre, which he said has had $533,000 on hand since May.

Dr. Gordon defended his course, saying that the total of preferred claims is more than $324,000 and that the department can make no further payments until the validity of each had been decided by the Luzerne County Court.

LIST DEMANDED

Another case cited by Shapiro was the Allentown Trust Company which he said has $166,000 in cash since May of this year.

Secretary Gordon insisted that Shapiro should submit a list of banks which he felt had not been handled correctly. That method, he said, would permit the department to give a detailed explanation of each case.

Turning to the Jefferson Title and Trust Company of Philadelphia, of which he is a director, Senator Shapiro said the cash balance is $44,000, which has not been distributed. Shapiro mentioned the fact that he had borrowed from the bank and since its closing had paid his loans and has a letter from its attorney complimenting him on his course.

Turner and Shapiro said "discrepancies" existed in different summaries submitted by the department. Turner said one concerned a $900 a month salary paid to an attorney employed in liquidating the Mountain City Trust Company, of Altoona.

The $900 monthly salary, Turner said, was that paid to Miss Ruth Forsht. Gordon identified Miss Forsht as an attorney attached to the Pittsburgh offices of the banking department.

WOMAN STARTS INSPECTION OF COAL FIELDS

Social Worker Probing Charges of Slavery And Relief Abuse

A little woman undertook a big job here today.

Hoping to focus the spotlight of public attention upon the distress of Western Pennsylvania's bituminous coal miner and the need for Federal legislation abolishing the company owned mining town, Miss Elizabeth Wight, Philadelphia social service worker, began a tour of the coal fields unded the banner of the Pennsylvania Security League.

She will investigate charges of peonage, intimidation and abuses in the administration of state relief funds.

She also will test her rights as a citizen to invade the company owned towns to spread the "low down" on Pennsylvania's law makers, contained in a publication, "Black News," compiled by the Pennsylvania Security League.

TOUR OF INSPECTION

Today her tour of inspection will carry her into North Bessemer, where mines of the Union Collieries are located; Renton, Russellton, Curtisville and Bairdsford.

Reports of outrageous treatment of miners have reached the league, Miss Wight said. Some of them she enumerated:

"At Harmarville, I am told that when the men struck a few weeks ago, many of them applied for relief. Some of them got it, but not until after they had returned to work.

"It seems in the majority of cases reported to me thus far that the public is subsidizing the coal companies, and the deeper in the indebtedness to the coal company the easier it is for the man to get relief."

"Relief funds are being used to take the place of the pitifully insufficient wages paid to miners.

"At the Jamison Coal Company, at Vandergrift, I am told, the men were on strike last winter and their relief was cut off by Robert Stewart, a member of the local relief committee who is also superintendent of the mine.

"It has been reported to me that the superintendent of the Vesta Coal Company (subsidiary of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company) also administers relief to needy families in that district."

Other mines in this district where relief is administered by coal company officials, Miss Wight said she had been told, included the Keystone Coal and Coke Company, the Connellsville Coal and Coke Company, the Henderson Coal Company, Isabella mine of the Wierton Steel Company, Tuscarora Coal Company and the Breniger Mining Company.

CHARGES 'SLAVERY'

Miss Wight said conditions at the Brenizer mine in Westmoreland County had been described to her as being "worse than slavery."

Among the Allegheny County mines Miss Wight said she intended to visit within the next few days are the Pittsburgh Coal Company and the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Company. She said she particularly wanted to visit the "Siberian" camp at Essen, where it had been reported to her that Pittsburgh Coal Company officials exiled "undesirable" miners and their families instead of evicting them from company owned houses into the highway.

Paper Firm Raises Wages $2,000,000

NEW YORK, July 19.—(INS.)—Wage increases totaling $2,000,000 yearly were announced today by International Paper Company for workers in mills in the United States, Canada and Newfoundland.

The increase, company officials said, was the result of increased consumption of all its products and in appreciation of employes' co-operation in accepting previous wage reductions. Rates of increase were not divulged.

2.6 Per Cent Gain In Jobs Reported

WASHINGTON, July 19.—(AP.)—Employment in Pennsylvania industries increased 2.6 per cent and workers received 9.3 more in wages last month than in May, The Labor Department reports.

Employment in the anthracite fields fell in June, but payrolls increased slightly.

France and U. S. Settle Clash Over Window

LONDON, July 19.—(AP.)—The international difference which arose yesterday at the meeting of wheat delegates to the Economic Conference, involving a French policy of "shut the window" and an American policy of "open the window," was settled today.

A French delegate "Papa" Gautier, protested yesterday when Frederick E. Murphy insisted that a window be opened. Gautier today draped window curtains over his shoulders to keep himself warm.

Murphy, informed that Gautier had been deeply offended, took an interpreter to the French delegate and apologized.

U. S. Joins Kidnaped Boy Hunt

at New Alexandria, Westmoreland County.

As a result of the telegram received by Mrs. Woods, search for Jack centered in New York. The message, sent from a Harlem telegraph office, read:

"Dear Mother: Arrived safely. Have some money. Be home Friday. Don't worry. Love, Jack."

Jack had no money when he left here. His mother said the telegram must have been sent by his abductor.

Anxiety for Jack was heightened by the McClintock boy's story of what occurred before he leaped from the kidnaper's automobile. Police said the man may be criminally insane. They did not believe an attempt would be made to hold the boy for ransom.

Floyd said he and Jack were standing at Shady avenue and Forbes street yesterday when the stranger stopped his automobile and asked to be directed to a drug store in Homewood.

Invited into the machine on a promise that they would be returned home, the boys joined the man and drove to a store in Homewood avenue. The man said he was connected with a chain drug firm.

REVOLVER IN HAND

The kidnaper entered the store and, when he returned, he held a revolver in his hand. The automobile then headed eastward on the William Penn highway. Floyd said the man told him he was bound for Connecticut.

Neither youth had an opportunity to escape until the automobile was stopped by a traffic light in New Alexandria. Then Floyd, sitting at the end of the seat, slipped out and fled.

Floyd said he got back to Pittsburgh by "thumbing" his way. Arriving home five hours after his escape, he spread the alarm. Mrs. Woods notified police.

The McClintock boy said the automobile bore Connecticut license plates. The number was not obtained. Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and Connecticut authorities were notified of the abduction.

Both Jack and Floyd were students at Taylor Allderdice High School.

MORE PLANTS RAISE WAGES

More money went into the workingman's pocket today as pay raises were given by employers in the Pittsburgh district.

The Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company boosted the wages at its Creighton and Ford City plants 12½ per cent to the level prevailing October 1, 1932. The company had made only one reduction in wages. About 3,000 are affected.

The Mesta Machine Company gave a 15 per cent raise. Common laborers were raised to 46 cents an hour. Nine hundred men now are employed, as compared with a normal payroll of 2,000. While no more men are being hired, an increase in orders was reported.

The Copperweld Steel Company, of Glassport, announced common labor wages were increased from 34 to 40 cents an hour, and hourly wages for piecework and tonnage 15 per cent. President S. E. Bramer said the increases were effective last Sunday. Office employes were reported working on full time schedules.

The United Engineering and Foundry Company, with plants in Pittsburgh and Vandergrift, established a minimum wage of 40 cents and increased all other hourly rates 15 per cent, effective Monday.

40-Hour Week Set By Rayon Industry

WASHINGTON, July 19.—(AP.)—A code of practices for the rayon and synthetic yarn producing industry calling for a 40-hour maximum week and $13 minimum weekly wage was submitted today to the Recovery Administration.

Hugh S. Johnson, administrator, set July 27 for start of hearings on the agreement, said to represent 80 per cent of the industry.

AGE PENSIONS AGAIN PUT UP TO MARTIN

Pinchot Wires Curt Reminder of Special Session Offer

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, July 19.—Gov. Pinchot has sent to Republican State Chairman Edward Martin a curt reminder that he has no reply to a former telegram sent Gen. Martin, offering to call a special session of the Legislature if the regular organization will abandon the blockading tactics on social legislation it adopted in the regular session.

The Governor, in his second telegram, reiterates that he is willing to call the session immediately, but that it would be a waste of money unless the Martin-controlled State Senate will agree to pass the resolution permitting the voters next November to decide whether they wish to adopt a constitutional amendment for old-age pensions.

Once more he rams home the fact that the burden for failure to grant old-age pensions rests upon organization senators who took refuge behind a committee refusal to report the resolution to the floor.

SUBTERFUGE CITED

The Senate voted, 27 to 20, not to take the bill from committee and bring it to the floor. Many Senators—Senator James J. Coyne being the only one from Allegheny County to resort to the subterfuge—contended they were willing to vote for old age pensions but would not vote to discharge the committee.

Many did not care to face the question in the open, and took refuge behind the fetish of committee courtesy. In effect, a vote not to discharge the committee was plainly a vote to deprive the state of the opportunity to decide on old age pensions, and the attempt at deception was too transparent to escape detection.

Meanwhile the state organization today had before it a proposition to agree that all bills introduced in a special session would be reported to the floor. There will be comparatively few bills, and the reasonable excuse, as in a regular session, that it would be impossible to consider on the floor every bill presented would not hold.

WANTS SWEATSHOP CURB

Gov. Pinchot, in addition to old age pensions, undoubtedly would embrace in a session call legislation on sweatshop conditions. Bills would be prepared as a result of the studies made by the sweatshop committee, which reported today, after weeks of investigation throughout the state.

This is a sore subject with many legislators, especially those who follow the industrial banner of Joseph R. Grundy and the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association. They do not care to face the issue on the floor of either House. Other members would be compelled to vote for such measures if a roll call comes, but would prefer to have committees quietly relieve them of the embarrassment of choosing between Mr. Grundy and the Republican state organization demands, and the wishes of their constituents.

MARTIN STAYS SILENT

CAMP RICKARDS, MT. GRETNA, Pa., July 19.—(INS.)—Gen. Edward Martin, Republican state chairman, displayed no inclination today to answer the telegram of Gov. Gifford Pinchot, who demanded an expression from him on the issue of old-age pension legislation for a proposed special legislative session.

He is averse to mixing politics with soldiering, for one reason, he said, and reiterated that last night when asked to discuss the Governor's communication.

Mrs. Pinchot 'Sorry' For Penna. Employer

HARRISBURG, July 19.—(INS.)—Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, wife of Gov. Gifford Pinchot, has little but "sympathy" for the president of the Lebanon Shirt Company, who wired to President Roosevelt a protest against her activities in rallying striking workers at Lebanon yesterday. She said:

"Never have I known a man to expose himself and his case so completely and so pitifully in a few sentences. Psychoanalysis would seem to be clearly indicated in his case."

Bars Hold Harriman After 'Fall in River'

NEW YORK, July 19.—(AP.)—Bars confined Joseph W. Harriman today while a judge considered whether to charge the former banker $25,000 for his latest journey to nowhere.

Harriman, awaiting trial on a charge of falsifying accounts of the Harriman National Bank and Trust Company, turned up late yesterday after a second disappearance from a nursing home.

He appeared a few hours after Federal Judge Caffey had ordered his $25,000 bail forfeited. The judge committed him to a Bellevue Hospital ward, which has barred doors and windows, for mental observation. Then the judge agreed to hear new arguments about the bail today.

The former banker hailed a taxi near the Hudson River yesterday. His clothes were dripping. Directing the driver to the nursing home, he said:

"Step on it. I just fell in the river."

After saying he spent the time since vanishing Monday morning in parks, he fell into a deep sleep at Bellevue.

Sweatshop Quiz Ends, Mrs. Pinchot Scored

HARRISBURG, July 19.—(AP.)—With its hearings completed, the Legislative Sweatshop Investigating Commission expects to file a preliminary report tomorrow.

Reverberations from the industrial unrest throughout Pennsylvania rang throughout the capital yesterday as the committee concluded its hearings with testimony from both employers and employes of the Harrisburg area.

Miss Charlotte E. Carr, newly-appointed Secretary of Labor and Industry, was attacked and defended; Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the Governor, led in sharp cross-examination of Miss Carr's foes, and witnesses told of low wages and "awful" working conditions.

Herman Greenfield, representing the Lebanon Shirt Company, of Lebanon, appeared to protest Mrs. Pinchot's action in joining girl pickets outside the plant earlier in the day, but was told by State Senator G. Mason Owlett, chairman:

"As far as Mrs. Pinchot is concerned, the committee has no control over her actions."

Owlett joined in the defense of Miss Carr, who was accused of fomenting strikes and "fixing" testimony for the hearings. He said the committee "has no other way of getting witnesses except through the Labor Department."

Meanwhile news from labor "fronts" was varied.

Agreement on several points was indicated at the final mediation hearings at Reading of shirt manufacturers and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. Both sides have promised to accept the findings of Henry Moskowitz, federal mediator.

Four hundred workers returned to Reading pretzel factories today, awaiting further mediation of their strike for a closed shop.

More than 1,000 employes stopped work at three hosiery mills in Philadelphia.

In Lansdale, tear gas was used by police in a vain attempt to rout pickets from the Dexdale hosiery mill.

Police Chief Rodney Shaver, of Jenkintown, who was directing 50 officers sworn in as deputy sheriffs, was struck on the arm with a brick.

AMERICAN WOMAN IN SPANISH CELL NEXT TO MANIAC

FREEDOM OF 5 SOUGHT BY U. S. ENVOY

Wife of One Nearing Collapse From Ravings Of Jail Neighbor

By EDWARD HUNTER
International News Service.

PALMA, Mallorca, July 19.—On the verge of a breakdown because her jail cell is next to that of a demented woman, Mrs. Caroline Lockwood, one of five Americans held here without bail, was examined by a physician today.

The physician completed the examination without reaching a final decision as to her mental and physical health, however, and left the jail stating he would subject her to another examination tonight.

He said this would be necessary before he would be able to draft a report which the Palma military judge is awaiting to enable him to decide whether Mrs. Lockwood should be released from the jail and sent to a hospital or to her home here.

TELLS OF ORDEAL

Mrs. Lockwood, complaining she "felt funny in the head," told of the examination in an exclusive interview with International News Service. She said weakly:

"Something must be done. I can't stand this. The doctor just inspected me, but gave me no idea what he found."

Mrs. Lockwood said she has "tamed" the demented woman in the adjoining cell, adding:

"She cries at the thought of my leaving her and hopes I will stay here as long as she. It is torture for me, since I am in virtual isolation because she is out of her mind and does not speak Spanish. I do not know Mallorcan, her native dialect.

"This isolation leaves me alone all day with dreadful thoughts and fears."

4 OTHERS HELD

Mrs. Lockwood is the wife of Clinton Lockwood, of Springfield, Mass., who is also held in the jail without bail. Three other Americans are also imprisoned on charges of striking a Civil Guard.

They have not been admitted to bail because, under the Spanish law which takes account of military caste, their offense is considered a serious one, and bail is not permitted.

The five Americans have been held in the jail for six weeks. The four men are said to be fairly comfortable, but Mrs. Lockwood, forced to listen day and night to the ravings of the mad woman in the next cell, is near distraction. Her husband submitted a petition for her removal to a hospital in fear she would break down completely.

U. S. TAKES ACTION

The United States government, meanwhile, is making efforts to have the prisoners released on bail. Final decision on this is expected tomorrow when Ambassador Claude G. Bowers confers with Premier Manuel Azana in Madrid tomorrow.

Several leading feminists in Madrid, Barcelona and elsewhere are appealing to the government on behalf of the Americans.

The military judge here, however, contiues in his relentless attitude, stating:

"Getting into trouble with Civil Guards is just as dangerous as getting into trouble with a military sentry who is on duty."

COLD HAMPERS ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, July 19.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt arranged to stay away from his office one more day today at the suggestion of his physician, to complete fully his recovery from Monday's indisposition.

He was dressed and ready to return to his desk in the executive office, but Dr. Ross T. McIntire, of the Naval Hospital, suggested that another day of relaxation would be best.

Marvin H. McIntyre, a secretary to the President, described the indisposition as a slight cold, said Mr. Roosevelt had no temperature and was feeling all right.

All engagements for the day were cancelled, including a luncheon to Ras Desta Demtu, son-in-law of the Emperor of Ethiopia, here on a special mission.

McIntyre said the President will return to his desk tomorrow and will keep his luncheon engagement then with Gen. Balbo, of the Italian fliers.

The luncheon with the special envoy of Ethiopia was postponed until Friday.

Aimee Pens Endearing Words To David, Her 'Beloved King'

Calls Him Undaunted Soul, Tender Lover And 'Daddy'

Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—Two weeks before she started for home, only to learn divorce summons is awaiting her, Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton pleaded with her husband for his love and confidence with fervor and eloquence she seldom used in her appeal for souls and salvation at Angelus Temple.

This became known yesterday when pasages from her love letters to Dave were revealed in Los Angeles as the dynamic blonde evangelist neared Baltimore, bewildered by the portly baritone's divorce action and saddened by his failure to reply to her radiogram message of love.

'Let 'er Rain!'

These letters, written from her bed in the American Hospital at Paris, were delivered to Dave and his manager, H. C. Brandon, just as the singer was starting his final rehearsing for theatrical engagements he says await him, now that he has determined to win his fame and fortune with his voice.

Deep emotion was portrayed by Mrs. Hutton in all the letters she dispatched so hopefully to the United States.

She wrote on June 30:

"Dear Head of Our House. Remember I love you and will never fail you or let you down.

"I am married to the loveliest family in the world, I am a Hutton, not a Semple or McPherson or Aimee—I am Mrs. David L. Hutton.

"My heart swells ith the pride of it. Trouble cannot touch us, Mister Man. We'll button up our overcoats of love, put up our umbrellas of loyalty and let her rain."

It was on July 4 that Aimee really opened her heart to David. She wrote:

"My Beloved Treasure:

"Another long day is almost ended. Old Glory is floating from the roof of the American Hospital (in Paris). New patients arriving, old ones check out. Babies are born and sick, weary folk fall into their last sleep.

"The life of the busy hospital flows on within and outside the heart of the great city throbs. But my heart and mind constantly revert to my gorgeous husband, his love, his words, and his caress.

"Each day I try to picture you—where you are, what time it is by your watch, whether you are home—in your room, eating, sleeping—dressing, drinking,- singing, longing for your wife, or discouraged with her, or—oh, everything.

"Sometimes I wonder when I get home whether you can be half so wonderful and half so real—

"Boy, oh boy," she sighs in bold, black ink. "We'll never be parted again with this baby's consent.

"Oh, daddy, you will love me, won't you?"

"Say yes, or I'll just curl up and die.

"Let us be very kind to each other—life has hurt us both—let's never hurt each other again."

Has Given Her Heart

And then, in the same long outburst of emotion, she continued:

"I love you, Mr. David L. Hutton! This little woman has not only given her heart and happiness into your keeping but has vested you in her mind's eye.

"A king—a tender lover—a student of God's word, a doer of His things in life—a humorist, a brave, dauntless soul, a thoroughbred—man's man, a sport, a dutiful and loving son, magnificent friend, as true as your eyes are blue and as clean in body and in spirit as the day you were born."

And then, in deep reverence, as indicated by preceding passages, she continued:

"Oh, David, let us make a closed corporation of three—Jesus, you and I.

"Let us make friends, great friends, friends worthwhile. Let us laugh, love, live, play with others—keep them—but let us have a secret stronghold of love and devotion—a flawless, inviolate, ivory tower, whose threshold no other foot shall cross but just we three."

With His Faith She Can Lick Cock-Eyed World, She Says

In a surgical mood, the pastor of Angelus Temple continued:

"The doctor today lanced my incision. It was a lot of fun! Just wait until I get a few comforting letters from you, from the man who is fulfilling his promise to love, honor and cherish me, and I'll get up and whip the cockeyed world.

"Don't you know, David, as long as we stand for each other all will end happily?"

And then, as if in a pensive mood, she added and underlined:

"I stupidly bring most of my troubles on myself."

Storm at Temple

The next day she turned her attention to the brewing storm at Angelus Temple and wrote:

"Oh, daddy, if only I could lie still in the sunlight out here with no disturbing thoughts of disgusting church wars. Please, daddy, settle the church mind and make them know how good and gentle and unselfish and consecrated to Christ's cross you are!

"How I wish they knew you as I do."

It was in the July 4 letter, written less than two weeks before David's cabled summons to come back to Los Angeles that she grew poetic. Wrote the goldenhaired evangelist:

"Sorrows? Burdens? Misunderstandings? Tears, hours of unhappiness—sure we'll have them, and some more.

"Yes, much of our cross we will deserve!

"Meekly let us bear it and that which we have not earned by sin, neglect or carelessness—that for which we are falsely accused let us bear most joyously for His sake. Feeling like Simon of old, we bear a measure of his cross."

BRITISHERS ADD TO BRIDGE LEAD

LONDON, July 19.—(AP.)—After whittling England's lead to 660 points today the American contract bridge team slumped and teatime found the Britons ahead with the largest margin yet, 3,370 points.

At that time 110 hands had been played. The Americans found the thirteenth in today's session particularly unlucky, dropping 1,150 points.

Ely Culbertson, who again slept only two hours, was suffering from abdominal pains and took a draught of indigestion medicine. All the players complained of the heat, which was extra oppressive in their soundproof rooms.

Ice blocks and lotions were demanded unanimously. Michael T. Gottlieb and Theodore A. Lightner, of the American team, ordered a rarety in England, iced coffee.

Culbertson, who has worn a white gardenia heretofore, changed to a red carnation, saying:

"Perhaps this will change our luck. It is about time we had a break and got on top."

POPULAR DANCE INVENTOR DIES

CHICAGO, July 19.—(AP.)—After effects of a recent operation proved fatal to Bee Jackson, 24-year-old dancer, credited by her friends with originating the Charleston several years ago.

Miss Jackson, born in Flushing, N. Y., had been ill some time. She came here several days ago to dance in a night club but appeared only two nights before illness forced her to go to a hospital. An appendix operation was performed a week ago. She died yesterday.

Long an exponent of the intricate Charleston dance, Miss Jackson was internationally known. She appeared several years ago in Vienna, London, Berlin and other European cities. Winning Charleston dance contests gave Miss Jackson her start on the stage and in night club entertainment.

JUDGE UPHOLDS WORLD FAIR NUDISTS

Why Rob Art Students Of Their Art? He Reasons

CHICAGO, July 19.—(AP.)—Nudists have found support in a ruling by Superior Judge Joseph B. David who settled the question so far as his court was concerned with the observation that "there is no harm and certainly no injury to public morals when the human body is exposed."

The Judge dismissed a case brought in efforts to prove that certain performances at the Century of Progress were "lewd, lascivious and degrading to public morals." In so doing he did more talking than the plaintiff's lawyer.

Said Judge David:

"Some people probably would want to put pants on a horse. Why, I hear that even the figures on the county building aren't immune and that some day someone is likely to climb up to drape them.

"There is no harm in exposing the human body. It is a beautiful work of nature. Evil to whom evil thinks. It's all old stuff to me."

The plaintiff's lawyer perspired, thumbed law books and cited laws. He outlined that at certain exhibits a girl danced with only two fans to distinguish her from Mother Eve. Elsewhere, he added, persons dropped in to sketch models showing "themselves without benefit of coverage." And he outlined other causes to uphold the contention of his client, Mary Belle Spencer, another attorney.

When he finished, the judge started his lecture:

"As far as lewdness is concerned, I have my own opinions, but I don't have to state them here. This court is not trying to reform the world. If there are nude models, what of it? Thousands of art students come here to pursue their endeavors. Why deprive them of the opportunity?"

TROTH PARRIED BY ELLIOTT

CHICAGO, July 19.—(AP.)—If Elliott Roosevelt ever decides to get married again he says he'll certainly let the people know about it. Until then he apparently intends to keep his own counsel.

He indicated as much upon his arrival in Chicago by airplane from Nevada, where he and his former wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt, Philadelphia society girl, were divorced.

Many questions, particularly concerning his reported romance with Miss Ruth Googins, of Fort Worth, Tex., were put to young Roosevelt after he had reached Chicago yesterday.

When he was asked about a possible second marriage, he said:

"Really, you haven't given me time to ask her yet.

"I'll certainly let all of you know if I decide to marry again."

Last night young Roosevelt called at the hotel where Miss Googins was registered.

He said he expected to stay in Chicago for a few days to visit the world's Fair with his sister, Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, who is expected to reach Chicago today, and then return to the West.

10 Years of Silence Brings Divorce Suit

CHICAGO, July 19.—(AP.)—Mrs. Rose Wach, in a bill for divorce, alleged that when her husband, Frank, came home 10 years ago with a bottle of liquor and she took it away from him, he closed up like a clam and hadn't spoke to her since. She also charged he was cruel.

'Streets of Paris' Defies Fair's Curfew Rule

CHICAGO, July 19.—(AP.)—Curfew rang at the World's Fair grounds early today, but no one seemed to mind, as most of the merrymakers kept right on making merry.

Agents sent around by Charles H. Thurman, director of public safety at the fair, to enforce the 1:30 a. m. closing order, said a number of the concessionnaire flatly refused to turn out the lights and send patrons home.

Gates at the exposition were closed for the first time at 11:30 o'clock last night, over objections of managements of some of the night life spots. Andy Rebori, Director of Streets of Paris, asked:

"Who ever heard of closing the doors of a night club at 11:30 and putting out the patrons at 1:30?"

As a result of the new closing order, prompted, Fair officials said, by increasing revelry in the wee small hours, Karl Eitel, president of the concessionnaires' organization, called a meeting to discuss ways and means of getting around it.

TWO SOUTHERN STATES VOTE FOR REPEAL

Washington on August 29. In September, Vermont, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota, Idaho and New Mexico will vote. Arizona will ballot in October while North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania and South Carolina vote in November.

On top of these, Oklahoma, Florida, Missouri, Montana, Utah, Virginia and Colorado will fix dates for a little later. Repeal leaders have no fears about securing votes in these states this year, if they continue to roll up victories in the other states.

Arkansas Votes 3 to 2 For Dry Repealer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 19.—(AP.)—Arkansas, a southern state with a "bone dry" law since 1916, today apparently had voted approximately 3 to 2 for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment as incomplete returns from its prohibition referendum were tabulated.

Shortly after midnight, M. L. Sigman, president of the New Deal Repeal Club, telegraphed President Roosevelt:

"I am very happy in presenting to you tonight this great state for the ratification of the Twenty-first (repeal) Amendment."

Today a tabulation from 1,078 of the state's 2,046 precincts showed the vote for repeal as 55,502 as compared with 35,148 against. Incomplete returns had been received from all the 75 counties in the state and it was estimated the total vote would not exceed 125,000.

Commenting on the returns, the Rev. Arden P. Blalock, Baptist minister here and one of the state prohibition leaders, said:

"With the going of Alabama and Arkansas for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, it is practically assured, but it will serve as a boomerang on our Democratic party."

H. K. Toney, Speaker of the Arkansas House of Representatives, said he would come to Little Rock today to confer with Gov. Futrell and legislative leaders to urge an immediate session to legalize beer and tax it for school purposes.

Arkansas voted to elect 75 delegates to a repeal convention August 1.

Alabama Falls in Line With Repeal States

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 19.—(AP.)—Alabama, in the heart of the traditionally dry South, today swung into the column for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment by a majority of nearly 2 to 1 on the face of incomplete returns from yesterday's prohibition referendum.

Late last night, Charles E. Rice, chairman of the forces opposing repeal in Alabama, conceded defeat but pointed out that the state dry laws still are in effect and said the prohibition forces would oppose any movement to change them.

Tabulations from 1,268 of 2,137 ballot boxes in the state gave for repeal 78,356 to 46,693 against it. The repealists had a majority of 44 of the 67 counties in the state at that time.

The state voted to elect 116 delegates to a repeal convention to be held August 8. Delegates are bound to vote as a unit on the basis of the referendum.

Colorado to Provide Vote on Repeal

WASHINGTON, July 19.—(INS.)—Colorado will vote on repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment next fall—and repeal will carry by a 2-to-1 vote—Gov. E. C. Johnson said here today.

A special session of the Legislature will be called within a few days to designate a date for the repeal vote. He said:

"I do not know whether the result in Alabama and Arkansas will have any effect, but Colorado will vote for repeal by a 2-to-1 vote."

Oklahoma Legislature Orders Repeal Vote

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., July 19.—(INS.)—Oklahoma today was assured of an opportunity to vote on the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. Legislation for the vote was completed late yesterday.

The vote will be held after December 5. Unless a special election is called, the question will be included in the state primaries next July.

Notre Dame Sports Head Dies on Street

NEW YORK, July 19.—(AP.)—Paul T. McGannon, 46, former assistant attorney general of New York state and for four or five years graduate manager of athletics at Notre Dame University, collapsed while strolling with his bride of a few months last night and died.

Girl Hurt When She Walks Against Auto

Florence Kelly, 26, of 916 Bell avenue, Carnegie, was in Allegheny General Hospital today with injuries suffered when she walked against the side of an automobile at Shore and Galveston avenues last night. Her condition was regarded as fair.

Divorce Looming

QUEEN ELIZABETH

Queen Elizabeth of Greece, His Rumanian Majesty's eldest sister, whose husband, ex-King George, today had decided to divorce her, according to dispatches from Greece to London.

EX-GREEK KING TO GET DIVORCE

BERLIN, July 19.—(INS.)—Former Queen Elizabeth, of Greece, eldest sister of King Carol of Rumania, has consented to allow the former King George a divorce, it was reported in Bucharest dispatches today.

The couple has become estranged because Elizabeth refuses to leave Rumania and join George, who prefers to travel abroad, particularly in England.

The former monarch now maintains an apartment at Brown's Hotel in London, but is out of town today.

His impending divorce suit has been reported in Bucharest for several years. The former King arrived in London July 2, and took lunch with King George, of England, and Queen Mary at Buckingham Palace five days later.

It is believed he is now traveling through the English countryside.

Man Thumbs Nose At Ex-Wife and Lands in Jail

NEW YORK, July 19.—(INS.)—Harold Chamberlain will be chivalrous to his divorced wife in future—around courts, at any rate.

Chamberlain was haled into Magistrate August Dreyer's court by his former wife, Loretta, for being $30 in arrears on alimony payments. The magistrate put him on probation.

As he left court, Chamberlain thumbed his nose at his spouse. Magistrate Dreyer saw him, called him back, revoked the probation and ordered him to post bond for payment of the alimony. Pending arrangement for the bond, Chamberlain was jailed.

GANG REPORTED READY TO FREE O'CONNELL

ALBANY, N. Y., July 19.—(AP.)—Tenseness gripped the city today.

Johnny O'Connell was expected home by nightfall tomorrow after being held prisoner by kidnapers since July 7.

Swift undercurrents of rumor churned in street and speakeasy conversations centering on the vanished youth's return.

Reports were hung on the family's sudden shift from a troubled uneasiness to open optimism. The carefree manner of one of O'Connell's politically-powerful uncles, Dan O'Connell, for the last 36 hours, proved the basis for speculation that a substantial part of the $250,000 ransom demanded has been paid.

A BIG 'IF'

A big "if," in capital letters, shaded the reports. One authority said:

"If nothing has happened to the negotiations, young O'Connell may be home before nightfall."

Completion of the private negotiations between the O'Connell family and the abductors was believed to have been reached yesterday with the printing in a New York newspaper of a note sent by one of the go-betweens to another.

John J. (Solly) O'Connell, father of the missing heir to the O'Connell brothers' political domain, has dropped from sight for several days, working desperately to recover his son. Not since last week when he made a mysterious trip to a hotel in Catskill have his movements been known.

LAUGHTER HEARD

Laughter and cheerful voices have been heard outside the 24-year-old National Guard officer's home. His mother has fully recovered from illness brought on by worry over her son's abduction.

District Attorney John T. Delaney reiterated the statement he has made daily since he took charge of the case:

"There are no developments."

Delaney was expected to decide today on his proposed plan to enlist the aid of the Coast Guard to search the New England coast for any suspicious craft on which young O'Connell may be held.

Acting on the request of Delaney, Schenectady police raided a vacant mill in that city on the strength of an unidentified man's information that O'Connell was being detained there. The raid was unproductive.

GUNMEN'S RAID FELLS THREE

CHICAGO, July 19.—(INS.)—Police squads scoured the West Side Italian quarter today for four gunmen who killed one man and wounded two others last night as they fired shotgun slugs into a soft drink parlor operated by Nick Cozzi.

Three times the gunmen circled the block in which the soft drink parlor is located, firing volleys from their speeding automobile.

Emil Onesto, 39, was killed and Frank Laneo was wounded critically when the terrorists fired into a crowd that had gathered when the first volleys riddled the front of the drinking establishment.

As he threw himself in front of his two children to shield them from the murderous fire, Angelo Mazzone was shot down. Taken to University Hospital, Mazzone was said to be dying from three wounds. The two children escaped the fire.

SOLDIER FACES 'SPY' TRIAL

BALBOA, C. Z., July 19.—(AP.)—Corp. Ralph Osman, a native of Brooklyn stationed at Fort Sherman with headquarters battery of the First Coast Artillery, today faced a general court-martial for alleged violation of the espionage act passed by Congress in 1917.

While details were withheld it was understood Osman intercepted secret documents forwarded from Washington and refused to turn them over to his superior officer.

Maj. Gen. Preston Brown, military commander of the Panama Canal Zone, said Osman's alleged offense was committed several months ago, but was not announced because of an investigation carried on with the co-operation of civil authorities in the Canal Zone and Panama, and completed July 10, when the court-martial was ordered.

The court is scheduled to convene in two weeks at Fort Sherman.

U. S. DRY HEAD SEES REPEAL

HOUSTON, Tex., July 18.—(AP.)—Prohibition is doomed and probably will be wiped off the statute books within eight months, Maj. A. V. Dalrymple, national prohibition administrator, said here today as he advocated immediate distillation of whisky and wine to meet future needs of the nation. He said:

"Prohibition is on the skids. We can't escape it and we might as well not 'kid' ourselves."

Maj. Dalrymple defended 3.2 per cent beer as a pledge of the Democratic party and said the federal prohibition forces would not attempt to keep beer out of dry states unless the United States Supreme Court declared it unconstitutional.

In advocating immediate distillation by licensed distillers, the prohibition administrator said only a small amount of liquor and wine was available and if prohibition were repealed immediately foreign liquors would have a distinct advantage over domestic.

Frank Ryman Named Settlement Chief

Selection of Frank Ryman as president of the Brashear Settlement to succeed Mrs. John M. Phillips, resigned after 17 years in the office, was announced today. Mrs. Samuel Diescher and Mrs. Nathanial Crow were elected vice presidents and Allan Reynolds treasurer and Mrs. Richard Perry secretary.

Approximately 162,017 men, women and children participated in the association's activities in the last year, according to the annual report.

Woman Badly Hurt, Husband Arrested

Mrs. Anna Smith, 50, of 6617 Butler street, was in West Penn Hospital today with a possible fracture of the skull, and her husband, J. F. Smith, 47, was under arrest in the Forty-third Street Police Station. Mrs. Smith was found unconscious in the living room of her home last night, police reported.

He had $1,565.

WALSH SLAIN, CHURCHMAN ASSERTS

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Voicing a suspicion that the late Senator Thomas J. Walsh was murdered to keep him from becoming a crusading Attorney General, Canon William Sheafe Chase, Episcopal leader, today proposed the creation of a new dry, anti-vice third party for the 1936 presidential elections.

Canon Chase offered the third party idea as a dry response to the overwhelming drive for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. He rejected a suggestion that former President Hoover should lead the new party, and recommended Senator Arthur Robinson (Rep.), of Indiana.

The noted clergyman expressed a "suspicion" that Walsh was murdered to block his plans to prosecute crooked financiers, and continued:

"I suspected Senator Walsh was murdered. My suspicions were so strong I wrote to a person in high authority, asking for a postmortem examination of his body. My request was ignored.

"I know that some days before he died, Senator Walsh said he would put about 20 financiers in jail. He was feared by crooked politicians and crooked financiers. In these days, you can have a man killed for a few dollars—anywhere from $25 to $2,500."

Walsh died on a railroad train, en route with his bride of a week from Florida to Washington, a few days before the inauguration of President Roosevelt. He had accepted appointment as attorney general. Physicians attributed his death to heart failure.

HAUGEN, FARM CHAMPION, DIES

NORTHWOOD, Ia., July 19.—(AP.)—Gilbert N. Haugen, 74, veteran Iowa Congressman who spent 34 years in the national House of Representatives as a champion of agriculture, is dead.

The holder of the record for longest continuous membership in the national House succumbed to heart disease and complications late yesterday. He was in a semi-conscious condition for the last dozen hours of his life. At his bedside were his daughter, Mrs. Joe Johnson, and his son, L. G. Haugen, of New York, vice president of the National City Bank, the only surviving relatives.

Best known of his endeavors for farm relief is his co-authorship of the McNary-Haugen measure in which he collaborated with Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon.

Haugen was one of many Republican leaders who went down to defeat in the Democratic landslide last fall.

SHOOTS WIFE, DAUGHTER; DIES

BERWICK, Pa., July 19.—(INS.)—H. P. Field, 58, prominent figure in the business and civic life of Berwick, died today of self-inflicted bullet wounds a few hours after he wounded his wife, perhaps mortally, and his daughter, Mary Alice Field, 32.

Mrs. Katherine Field, 56, was in a critical condition at the Berwick Hospital. The daughter, who is the divorced wife of Theodore Stegmaier, scion of the Wilkes-Barre family of brewers, suffered only a minor wound of the shoulder.

Field was engineer in charge of mine cars at the American Car and Foundry Company and was a director of the First National Bank of Berwick. Mrs. Field is the granddaughter of the late Frank R. Jackson, who with the father of Secretary of the Treasury Woodin founded the American Car and Foundry Company here.

ENLARGED PLAN FOR P. O. RAMP FAVORED

A special committee of businessmen and city engineers to which City Council referred plans for the new postoffice traffic ramp was to recommend "Plan A" to Council today.

The committee, appointed a week ago, met for the first time in the Mayor's conference room yesterday and elected John M. Rice chairman.

"Plan A," adopted unanimously after some discussion, included the ramp in a much larger plan for widening Bigelow boulevard and by-passing conflicting traffic over Seventh avenue.

A resolution adopted by the committee will recommend that Council appoint a committee of five to place this larger plan before government authorities. Engineers estimate that the project would cost $1,762,000 in property damage and $352,000 for actual construction. The committee hopes the government will appropriate the money from the $3,300,000 public works fund.

"Plan A" would be an ultimate part of the contemplated cross-town thoroughfare designed by the City Planning Commission.

The postoffice ramp would bridge Seventh avenue side by side with the Bigelow boulevard ramp, and would have its entrance on Strawberry way, Telegraph square.

Father Exhibits First Regret at Killing of Boy

BEAVER, Pa., July 19.—The calm maintained by Robert J. Simington, 50-year-old railroad draftsman, of Rochester, since he walked into the jail here last Friday and told Warden Hamilton Brown he had killed his son, Burton, 14, was broken during a visit with his two sons, Richard and Nathaniel, of Pittsburgh.

Referring to the chloroforming of his son, he said:

"Maybe I did the wrong thing."

Simington had previously refused the request of the two sons that he ask jail officials for permission to attend the funeral services for the slain youth.

What Good Is a Baby?

POOR little, chubby feller! Can't sit up at the dinner table. Can't talk above a coo. Can't walk or run or jump. Can't play with anything but his own pink toes. Can't hardly stay awake!

What good is a baby? No good unless you love him. An orphan to anybody else. But if he belongs to you—say, all the money in the whole wide world couldn't buy a single yellow curl from his blessed baby head! That's the way it is with hundreds of items in this Reduction Sale of ours. They can't pay their rent. They've been here too long. Some are a little soiled. Dots and Flashes.

The Fidel LaBarba's (she was Billy de Beck's ex-squaw) have reached that verdict . . . Peggy Fears, now wearing her felt hat and mannish coat a la Dietrich (no trousers, though), asserts that Jimmy Walker "broke up her home" . . . She probably will have it Nevada'd . . . Abe Lyman is the pivot in a triangle dealing with the crash of a studio head and his wife . . . The Gary Cooper-Countess di Frasso matter is lopsided, again—Ivan Lebedeff and Larry Gray pinch-hitting . . . The legends are that Rudy Vallee and Lou Holtz recently had kidnap trouble.

The Neil Hamiltons are straining at the handcuffs . . . There are several reporters in L. A. who know who killed William Desmond Taylor . . . The Bruce Warrens have phffft! Evalyn Knapp trouble . . . Clara Bow's ex-sec'y, Daisy Devoe, is being helped back to happiness by the Samuel Hoffensteins. She's their maid . . . Flash!—Frank Atkinson, of Fox Films and Britain, lost his long battle against deportation because of illegal entry. He must shove off by August 1 . . . Warden Lawes of Sing Sing is completing another book to be tagged "By the Grace of God."

The Al Christies are on the verge . . . Lupe Velez and Countess di Frasso, practically sis-in-laws, finally met at the Colony, being introduced by this dep't. No fireworks . . . Walter Donaldson, the hit songsmith, and Marilyn Young are plenty Caliente . . . Jack Gilbert still has the gift parrot that Garbo gave him . . . It makes that tongue noise better than any critic.

Mrs. Samuel Goldwyn is keeping a diary of all parties she attends and she jots down notes on gossip, people, etc.—for a book one day. Goldwyn, it appears, once got 25 Gs for a book . . . Michael Balcon, the British film trust king, will get a knighthood soon . . . The Bailey Hamiltons of London are telling it to a judge. The heart is John Loder . . . Scallions to "Low and Behold," a new low in amusement. It sums up Hollywood theatricals . . . Orchids to Darryl Zanuck for casting Paul Kelly as the lead in "Broadway Thru a Keyhole," when all other studios feared those who wrecked Arbuckle.

Ricardo Cortez and Connie Lewis (Geo. Fitzmaurice's sister-in-law) are cupiding out loud . . . Victor Fleming and the ex-Mrs. Arthur Rosson, who once were hearts, are blazing again . . . The theater's working code, prepared under the provisions of the National Recovery Act, will provide a definite way of bringing the musicians and stage hands into line . . . Their working arrangements will be radically altered . . . Richard Norton is going crazy because of Sari Maritza's indifference.

The lowdown on the Jack Warner matter: Mrs. Warner left Hollywood with her son and "Aunt Hett," presumably for Paris . . . The son, however, is with kin in N. Y. and "Aunt Het" is in Philly under a different name! Mrs. Warner is Paree-bound in the solo manner, which is more fun . . . He will fight a divorce because the California Community Law would give her half of Warner's! . . . And Don Alvarado's estranged bride is wondering . . . David O. Selznick, MGM vice-prez, is getting 4 Gs per, but he gave up an RKO contract (to please his pop-in-law, Mayer) that would have netted him, via the percentage agreement, $700,000 in a year! . . . His pal, Merian Cooper, who inherited that job, will make more coin than any production exec in H'wood, including Thalberg . . . The Hal Wallaces (Louise Fazenda) are yowzuh.

Adolphe Menjou, her lead in "Worst Woman of Paris," is Barrymoring Benita Hume off stage, but she's trying hard to be true to Jack Dunfee . . . The Roy Del Ruths have gone oop! . . . Grace Hayes of the Foy tribe just got a demand for coin—from snatchers who threaten to theft her tot. . . . The A. H. Jeffries, big money people of California, are having it Mexicanned to get quick action. Ditto the Orson Tracy Johnsons. With the final decree they will swap squaws . . . Vincent Riccardi is handling both cases . . . F. D. Roosevelt, Jr., will be ass't editor of "Yachting" . . . Tashman and Connie Bennett almost came to blows in a beauty parlor, again . . . Bridal Pair May Act In Film

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, July 19.—Hollywood's newest bride and bridegroom may appear together in a picture. As soon as Marquerie Churchill and George O'Brien return from their wedding trip, Fox will offer her the job of leading woman in "Frontier Marshall."

Miss Churchill

If she accepts, it will be the second picture she and George have appeared in together. The first, and it was made a long time ago, was "Riders of the Purple Sage."

Although Marguerite and George have been going together for a long time, their application for a marriage license was the first Hollywood knew of a definite understanding between them.

Since George lived at the Hollywood Athletic Club during his bachelor days, the Beverly Hills real estate men presumably will have another cutomer in the near future. Or, the actor's friends point out, he may delay making a permanent home until his new picture is finished and he decides where to go on his vacation.

* * *

Abe Lyman swears it was coincidence, but the other night when Thelma Todd (his ex-fiancee) and her husband, Pat De Cicco, came into the Cocoanut Grove to celebrate their first wedding anniversary, the band played in order: "It Was a Night in June When I First Met You," "An Orchid to You," "Let's Call It a Day" and "Somebody Stole My Gal."

Miss Gaynor

* * *

After she finishes her current picture, Janet Gaynor has two months off. A few weeks ago, she announced she would take a trip to Tahiti.

* * *

Margaret Kruis, one of those injured when the assassin, Zangara, fired at President Roosevelt and mortally wounded Anton Cermak, has written to the Fox studio offering to work in the picture based on the life of the Chicago Mayor. Unfortunately, her communication arrived after "The Man Who Dared" was completed.

The champion inferiority complex has been uncovered in Hollywood.

Many years ago, an amateur fortune teller at an English garden party read Edgar Norton's palm and told him he would never make a success in life.

Time passed. Mr. Norton became an actor, trekked to the Hollywood film colony where you have seen him dozens of times in butler roles.

But in addition to this, Mr. Norton had a big idea—to buy the screen rights to "Alice in Wonderland." For two years he trailed heirs to the authors of the English dramatization. Finally his work was completed.

Mr. Norton's idea has borne fruit. Today, with a fat Paramount check in his pocket, he is on his way to England. And before he returns, the actor told here seriously, he intends to seek out the palmist (she was an acquaintance of the family) and make her swallow that lugubrious prophecy.

* * *

Members of the visiting Yale crew have been seeing the Hollywood late spots in company with film beauties. Tall Janet McLeod found a dancing partner even taller in William S. Garnsey III, stroke of the crew. Also in the Cocoanut Grove were Martha Sleeper and Yale's Charles Meyer, Jr.

ARBUCKLE WILL TO BE FOUGHT

FRESNO, Cal., July 19.—(AP.)—Asserting the announced value of the estate of the late Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle, former film comedian, is so low as to be certainly incorrect, B. W. Gearhart, Fresno attorney, today said he had been retained by Arbuckle's brother, Harry Arbuckle, of Fresno, to attack the document.

Mrs. Arbuckle announced after her husband's death the estate is valued at only $2,000. Gearhart charged this figure is incorrect as he prepared to file probate proceedings in the California courts. He will seek to have the probate of the will in New York courts terminated on the ground Arbuckle had no residence in that state. He said:

"We believe that Arbuckle's estate has assets consisting chiefly of a large amount of unregistered government bonds and that it is worth far in excess of the $2,000 announced."

Prof. W. H. Shelton Succeeds Dr. Raschen

Dr. J. F. L. Raschen has been succeeded by Prof. W. H. Shelton as chairman of the department of modern languages at the University of Pittsburgh, according to an announcement made by Dean L. P. Sieg.

Dr. Raschen, who is known as an authority on the German poet, Goethe, will remain as senior professor, it was stated. Pressure of other duties was given by Dr. Raschen as his reason for requesting his release as chairman.

Woman Wins Slice Of Tom Barry Estate

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—(AP.)—A claim Loretta V. Donahue, Easton, Pa., filed against the $25,000 estate of the late Tom Barry, playwright and scenarist, was settled for $6,500 yesterday in Superior Court where it was revealed Barry also was known as Hal C. Donahue.

Al Jolson Sings Like Bait And Big Fish Bites

Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—"Mammy!"

He sings to 'em and then they bite.

That's Al Jolson's Catalina fish story, and he sticks to it.

With rod and reel, the comedian arrived at the island by airplane. Before you could say "climb up on my knee, sonny boy," Al was aboard Capt. Parker Pence's fishing launch . . .

An hour passed. No bite. The Jolson countenance was dour.

"Sing to 'em, Al," suggested Pence.

"Maaa-huh—mee," obliged Al.

And then—

A nibble. The refrain echoed over the sunlit waters and Jolsonian sunshine spread across Al's face . . .

A bite! The whirr of the reel. The deft touch of the skillful angler—

And a 56-pound halibut was brought to gaff.

"Now," said Jolson, "I'll sing bass."

And before you could say "when friends forget me, let them all forget me, I still have you, sonny boy," a 32-pound white sea bass was on Jolson's line.

Mammy!

'Forgotten Man' Bobs Up, Wife Surprised

CHICAGO, July 19.—(AP.)—A "forgotten man" showed up yesterday—in court.

He was William Grosskopf.

And was his former wife, Mrs. Pauline Solon, surprised to see him!

Grosskopf took up residence in the County Jail in June last year after Mrs. Solon heard he was going back to his native Germany without paying her home $3,000 back alimony.

Brought into court to meet him, Mrs. Solon exclaimed:

"Why, I had forgotten all about you. I never knew you were still in jail."

Judge Joseph Burke released him on his promise to find a job and pay the back alimony.

Schenley Lawn Concert Tech Night

Program:

March of the Boyars.....Halvorsen
Fantasy Overture, "Romeo and Juliet".....Tschalkowsky
Symphonic Variations.....Franck
Suite No. 2 from "Carmen".....Bizet
Una voce poco, from "Barber of Seville".....Rossini
Dance of the Comedians, from "The Bartered Bride".....Smetana

The fourth week of the lawn concerts at Hotel Schenley struck a snag last night when rain invited the audience into the dining room, where we all felt ourselves in a continental cafe instead of in the usual music garden. The music was no less enjoyable there, indeed the ill-wind blew to the advantage of all.

Mr. Lissfelt

It was Tech night, J. Vick O'Brien conducting, and two charming young ladies of the ducting, and two charming young ladies of the school, Bess Moredock, pianist, and Sue Seiger, soprano, being soloists. The program was more ambitious than heretofore; unfortunately for the conductor, the "Romeo and Juliet" fantasy was played out-of-doors, for he had plenty to say about that music and the score is far too profound for al fresco acoustics. O'Brien plays with real verve and at last gave us as encore one of his own lovely compositions, an unnamed melody which everyone liked at once.

Bess Moredock plays with real assurance, though little poetry, and her tone is hardly commensurate for orchestral work. She gave a clear-cut reading of a Chopin nocturne as encore.

Sue Seiger belongs to that fortunate class of singers, the coloratura, whose music finds acclaim for its brilliance with all audiences. The voice is exceedingly small in its present state, though quite flexible and showing tremendous possibilities still undeveloped. As encore she gave a gay reading of Johann Strauss' "Voices of Spring."

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

The Monument

IT WAS a walk of seven blocks to the tennis court and, on this particular morning, Joe and Alice decided to take the short cut through the cemetery.

Joe was talking. He was always talking. A writer of short stories and in love with the girl on his arm, he talked incessantly of plots and possibilities and love and romance. Perhaps he was wise enough to know that, after his marriage, he wouldn't be able to get many more words in. So he was making hay while the sun shined.

"Even here," said Joe, as he waved his free arm majestically, "there is love and romance. Yes, my sweet one, even in a cemetery. Look. All around you are little shafts of stone and granite to mark the resting places of those who wait for loved ones to join them."

Alice shuddered.

"But Joe," she said, "how can you speak of love and death in the same breath! Isn't death usually the ebb of love!"

The writer smiled tolerantly.

"Darling," he replied, "love is eternal and always survives death. Don't you remember me saying that in my last story; the one that was so good that most of the magazines were afraid to print it! Certainly you do. So far as love is concerned, death is only an intermission."

"Joe," said Alice, "there's a fly on your nose." . . .

As they neared the cemetery's exit, Joe halted before the tallest monument in the place. On a huge pedestal was a granite man. He was tall, wore a windsor tie, and his right hand was thrust between the buttons of his coat. The inscription was simple:

"Raymond Raymonds," it read 'This monument was erected by his wife, Margaret, in the year of his death, 1890."

In front of the monument was a small mound, and around the whole thing a green picket fence. Joe looked around him, musingly. Then he sighed.

"Ah, my dear Alice," he murmured, "if you but had my brain; the brain of an author.

"Look at this monument. What do you see? Nothing but a man of granite, standing on a huge pedestal. But what do I see? Love. Heroism. Romance.

"Can't you see that figure alive, walking? Notice the heroic attitude, the intellectual forehead, and the dignified Van Dyke beard. See his eyes—how they look ahead at the world he has since left, unafraid.

"Look at the inscription," he went on dreamily. "Born in 1840, and just twenty-one years of age when the North and South began their titanic struggle. Nobody need tell me that he heard the call of his president, the noble Abraham Lincoln—and that he fought valiantly until peace was declared.

"Then the return. The glorious, triumphant return. The war is over now. See the bands, the flags, the heroes—and see Raymond Raymonds as he steps from the line and has a medal pinned upon his chest. His mother weeps with happiness."

Joe paused. Instinctively, Alice leaned her head against his shoulder.

"Is is all so simple," he went on, "through the eyes of a writer. I can see Raymond Raymonds now as, five years later, the course of his life has changed. He has married a beautiful girl. They have two fine children, a boy and a girl.

"Raymonds is now a lawyer. From the wealthy he exacts heavy fees. But from the poor he takes nothing but gratitude for fighting their battles.

"The city adores the man. His war record and his matchless home life leave nothing to be desired, and his law practice is the best in the city.

"Every day, his open barouche—drawn by two frisky, dappled grays—leaves the winding driveway in front of his home. He turns to blow a last minute kiss to his loving wife who stands in the doorway with the kiddies. He does this each morning—until at the age of 50, in the very prime of life, he leaves his home for the last time."

Alice bit her lip and tightened her hold on the man's arm. Joe's voice became dramatic.

"It is the way of life," he continued. "What must be, my dear one, must be. While Raymonds is driving downtown on the dreaded day, he sees an elderly woman fall in front of a heavy brewery wagon. Without a second's hesitation he leaps from his barouche, tosses the lady to safety—and himself dies under the heavy wheels."

The writer stopped suddenly. An old man—a lawncutter—had come into view.

"Wait, Alice," Joe asserted, "my author's instinct tells me now that this old man can complete my story. I have a hunch that he knew Raymond Raymonds. Listen, while I draw the story from him."

He leaned forward.

"Mister," he called, "did you know Raymond Raymonds?"

The old man looked up.

"Yep," he replied. "I was right here the day they buried him."

"I thought so," exulted the writer. "I am an author, and I was just describing him to my bride-to-be. That monument is a grand tribute to his memory. He must have been a wonderful man."

The old man smiled toothlessly.

"Son," he replied, "Raymond Raymonds was the biggest bum on two feet. Never worked in his life. And when he died, his wife said: 'The only favor Ray ever did for me was to die—and in appreciation, I'm going to erect the biggest monument in the cemetery for him.'

"So that's how he happened to get a monument." . . .

Water Wagon Din At 4 A. M. Sent To Alderman

MONTREAL, July 19.—(AP.)—Joseph Schubert, an alderman, answered his telephone at 4 a. m. to hear a voice say:

"I am one of your constituents. How does it feel to be awakened at 4 a. m.? City water wagons fill up right under my window at all hours of the night. How do you like it?"

Schubert asked the city to do something about the situation.

Radio Plots New Musical Comedies

By AIRCASTER

Every mid-summer the chatter along the almost-deserted Radio Row turns to trends in imminent showmanship for the autumn.

A new thought, a fresh idea, a novelty, an innovation—they all go to make up radio's mid-summer night's dream.

In the leading agencies, you'll find the self-ordained and fairly successful prophets leaning toward a form of entertainment which as yet, has not clicked with the public fancy—aerial musical comedy.

* * *

Like Stage Show

There is much doubt, however, about such a form of entertainment replacing the good old mediocre and cut-and-dried amusement forms this season.

I know of perhaps a dozen musical comedy shows in preparation. The job is much unlike that of staging a theater show. To put one series of musical comedy shows on the air, at least 26 scores and librettos must be written, and the task involves tremendous sums.

* * *

I am inclined to believe Sigmund Romberg, who holds that radio is not yet ready for musical comedy on a large scale, mainly because of the inability of good composers to turn out scores in fabricated form and the fact that the radio public hasn't begun to grow sufficiently weary of radio as a mere reproducing medium to set up a howl and a demand for more originality.

Whiteman Show

The two-hour broadcast, innovated by the Paul Whiteman Orchestra over a New England network and scheduled to reach Pittsburgh this month, is fated to enjoy only a short-lived prestige as the longest program on the kilocycles.

Eavesdroppers in the East will hear the final 120-minute divertissement on the night of July 24, which is next Monday. Thereafter, the event will become a coast-to-coast show, and will take up only the conventional one hour.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

The hero of the hour is J. S. Musgrave, of the East End. He has a remedy for red ant trouble.

Place catnip or peppermint around the pantry and ice box or any other place that the little nuisances gather, and they will depart.

One bunch of mint chased them away from his house.

From Brookline, Catherine Wenger answers the call of distress by giving her mother's method of ridding the house of ants. She trailed them to find their entrance to the house and then sprinkled carbon oil around very freely.

The ants will come as far as the oil and then turn back. Under the ice box casters place a Mason jar lid filled with carbon oil. Just keep adding fresh oil and your troubles will soon disappear.

There's the good turn for the day and here's hoping we enabled the housewife to concentrate on that new Prudence Penny Contest we have been growing hoarse about on the radio.

Joseph Spachtolz, Ford City—You can get most any kind of a souvenir of the World's Fair at most any kind of a price. Why don't you write to an exhibitor at the fair? I saw some nice ash trays from one of the automobile exhibitors.

* * *

Someone writes me from Coraopolis, signing a name to the letter, that accidentally he stumbled over barrels of what might be moonshine on a farm near there. It happened when he went over to discover why the calf bawls all night. He's not interested in the barrels, but wants somebody to give the calf food and water.

I hope this doesn't cause any undue activity on the farm.

61 MENU HOLDS INTEREST OF HOUSEWIFE

One dollar dinner menus at an actual cost of 25 cents per person are catching the interest of thousands of housewives throughout the reading area of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. The women of the home have been pretty well excited over the competition to demonstrate what they could serve at $1.50 for four but the new cost price has greatly increased the interest in the Sun-Telegraph-Prudence Penny $100 weekly cash prize dinner menu contests. Now the question is: 'Can four persons be served a well-balanced, appetizing dinner menu at a cost not to exceed ONE DOLLAR?

From the early returns on the answers to this question housewives are evidently of the opinion that it is not only practical but consistently economical to serve four persons at $1 instead of at $1.50. A remarkable variety of menus has already been entered and while the first five weeks' contests opened the eyes of women, Contest No. 6 is going to bring some startling and really helpful results. In the $1 menu idea there is an opportunity to exercise real thrift and at the same time, according to menus already submitted, put a mighty satisfactory dinner on the table.

Housewives, everywhere, are cordially invited to participate in this new contest. They may send in as many menus as they wish. There is an entry blank and a complete set of rules in today's Sun-Telegraph. Entries for Contest No. 6 do not have to be submitted before Tuesday night.

NEWSIES TALK PEACE TERMS

Unemployed Council, which has Communist affiliations.

Of the 19 arrested for destroying papers, five were lads under 16 and were sent to the Juvenile Detention Home, one escaping on the way. Eight admitted they were not newsies.

A statement signed by United States District Attorney Graham and Postmaster Anderson today warned against interference with newspapers placed in the mails and pointed out, among a half dozen other possible offenses:

"The crime of detaining or destroying newspapers is punishable by a fine of not more than $100 or imprisonment of not more than one year, or both."

TO PROTECT MAILS

The federal official emphasized the seriousness of obstructing the mail and said:

"The federal government will protect the mails to the utmost and every agency will be invoked to see that there is no interference."

Gov. Pinchot sent two investigators into the city.

Sheriff Gollmar said:

"My first duty is to maintain peace and order . . . This, of course, I shall do . . . All licensed vehicles have the right of free transportation on the highways and any attempt to obstruct them is punishable."

POLICE GET ORDERS

Following Mayor Herron's broadside that order would have to be maintained, the police were given definite instructions to prevent interference with delivery of papers, with a warning for nonperformance of duty. Police Supt. McQuaide said he felt the newspapers should instruct their truck drivers "to protect the interests of their own papers," but that he would preserve order to the fullest extent of his power.

All these warnings were considered to be directed chiefly against the Communist-connected gangs which have been blamed for most of the disturbances, although the caution held for all trouble-makers.

Government agents, headed by C. D. McKean, were checking reports that Communists were involved. Interference with mails and with interstate commerce were the grounds for the federal investigation.

Known Communists mingled with newsies as they met last night in West Park. Organization of a Newsboys' Protective Association was effected at the meeting, which was an oratorical triumph for Albert Solly Mazer, who is not a newsboy but, as he says of himself, "representative of 40 different organizations."

TURNS TO BREAD

After a stirring speech in which he touched on the French Revolution Mazer hurried up to the Irene Kaufmann Settlement, where he spoke at a meeting to protest the price of rye bread.

These protestants, organized as the Consumers Protective Association Committee, hope to see Mayor Herron today, but Mazer asked to be excused; he explained he had to hop back to another meeting of the newsies. Mazer several times has appeared before Council; his last such protest speech was against the Polish atrocities.

At the West Park meeting, Albert Bonach, former marathon dancer, was elected chairman. One speaker advised the boys not to tear up the papers in the future, but to sell them as junk.

Newspaper representatives explained the strike occurred after an adjustment of wholesale rates charged North Side and East End street sellers was announced. This adjustment equalized the rates with those paid by 80 per cent of the street sellers. However, the 20 per cent objected to an increase of 25 cents a hundred copies and with help from the Unemployed Council began to interfere with the sale of papers.

Only street sellers are affected.

George Bailey, of the Unemployed Council, is serving a jail sentence for his part in the strike.

Police Capt. John Schnurr arrested six youths at a meeting of strikers at the Unemployed Council headquarters at 121 First avenue this afternoon. Capt. Schnurr said they were radical agitators.

U. S. Government Warns Against Delaying Mails

Following is the text of the federal government's warning against interference with newspapers in the mails:

TO THE PUBLIC:

A difference has arisen between the newspapers and certain newsboys who sell on the street corners, over the amount to be allotted to the newsboys for the sale of papers. In this matter, the federal government has no concern other than to hope for a speedy and happy solution of the difficulty.

However, the postal authorities have been informed by the representatives of the three Pittsburgh newspapers that they intend to deposit their newspapers in the United States mails for delivery. Upon compliance with the postal regulations, this mail will be accepted and delivered in accordance with the postal regulations.

Fearing that some individuals may not know the penalties incident to any interference with the mails and obstructing the delivery thereof, it has been thought best to bring to the attention of the public the seriousness of any action tending to impair the delivery of the mails.

The penalty for injuring mail bags is a fine of not more than $500 or imprisonment of not more than three years, or both.

The penalty for stealing postoffice property is a fine of not more than $200 or imprisonment of not more than three years, or both.

The penalty for stealing or forging mail locks or keys is a fine of not more than $500 and imprisonment of not more than 10 years.

The crime of stealing, secreting or embezzling mail matter is punishable by a fine of not more than $2,000 and imprisonment of not more than five years, or both.

The crime of detaining or destroying newspapers is punishable by a fine of not more than $100 or imprisonment of not more than one year, or both.

The crime of assaulting a mail custodian and robbing the mail and wounding the custodian is punishable by an imprisonment of 25 years.

The crime of obstructing the mail is punishable by a fine of not more than $100 or imprisonment of not more than six months, or both.

The crime of unlawfully entering a postoffice car is punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment of not more than three years, or both.

The federal government will protect the mails to the utmost and every agency will be invoked to see that there is no interference.

Supt. of Police Franklin McQuaide has promised the fullest co-operation of his force.

In view of the foregoing warning of the seriousness of any attempt to interfere with the delivery of the mails, the knowledge that the powers of both the city and federal government will be invoked to protect them, and the assurance that anyone so interfering will be speedily and promptly prosecuted to the full extent of the law, it is hoped that there will be no interference or disorder connected with the reception, transportation and delivery of this mail.

Any attempt to interfere with the reception, transportation and delivery of this mail should be immediately reported to L. C. Kennedy, chief postal inspector, room 405, Federal Building, Pittsburgh, or J. B. Anderson, postmaster.

LOUIS E. GRAHAM, United States Attorney.
JAMES B. ANDERSON, Postmaster.

PISTOL WAVERS LAND IN CELL

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., July 19.—(AP.)—Mr. and Mrs. William Clark, of Washington, who, police said, flashed pistols freely, were arrested last night, charged with an attempt to hold up Lehman Ebersole, gasoline station owner.

Ebersole reported that Clark drew a pistol after buying gasoline, but fled when Ebersole called to the attendant at a neighboring station.

As the couple drove away, Ebersole said, Mrs. Clark pointed a pistol at the man who came running to his aid.

They drove toward Shippensburg, but were arrested by Corp. C. W. Grein, of the state highway patrol, as they doubled back on their trail.

OFFICER LOSES COYNE AID

Fuel was added to the factional fight today in Senator James J. Coyne's home ward, the Fourth.

Constable John S. Ridge said he had been notified that the Senator's brother, Philip Coyne, who is Ridge's bondsman, planned to go into court and have the bond lifted.

Ridge regarded this as the answer to a suit he filed yesterday. He asked the courts to remove Deputy Constable Andrew Conroy, contending the deputy refused to help on raids. Ridge said today:

"My attempts to clean up the ward are being hampered."

FLOUR TAX UP TO COMPANY

The Board of Public Education today indicated it would refuse a request by the Washburn-Crosby Company, Inc., that the board pay the new tax of $1.38 a barrel on 1,200 barrels of bread flour ordered from the company June 12.

N. R. Criss, solicitor, warned the board at a meeting yesterday that it might face ouster proceedings if an attempt were made to change the flour contract.

He said the successful low bid was $5.15 a barrel, and that one of its conditions was that quotations include "any and all state and federal taxes."

Fish That Won't Swim Found by Scientist

WASHINGTON, July 19.—(Universal.)—A fish that doesn't choose to swim!

This is the report of E. D. Reid, Smithsonian Institution biologist, who has found specimens of a strange fish at the headwaters of the James River in Virginia, believed to be the only place where it is found.

The fish has no air bladder—almost the equivalent of a bird without wings. The air bladder is what enables the fish to float.

According to Reid, this fish lives in the very rapid streams where it must either stay on the bottom or be washed away.

Many a hostess decided yesterday that the ideal place to entertain was at inviting Longue Vue Country Club with its many gay tables on the terrace shaded by vivid-hued umbrellas.

Many women in smart, colorful summer costumes lunched beneath umbrellas or on the canopy-covered terrace.

Some came in the morning for golf, and stayed for luncheon and bridge with more choosing just luncheon and bridge than the morning of golf.

Miss Gertrude Scott entertained on the terrace before luncheon. Among her guests was charming, young Mrs. E. James Bisiker, of Surrey, England.

Visiting Mother

Mrs. Bisiker, the former Ruth Phillips, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Herbert Houghton Phillips, of Butler. Mrs. Bisiker is a niece of Mrs. Thomas Phillips of Butler. The visitor, who wore a navy blue, triple-sheer chiffon dress, and her mother are dividing their time between Pittsburgh and Butler.

Both Mrs. Herbert Houghton Phillips, in a black and white crepe costume with a swagger jacket, and Mrs. Thomas Phillips in a biege crepe swagger coat suit, were there.

Among Miss Scott's many other guests were Mrs. Floyd Rose, Mrs. William Aiken, Mrs. Robert Lee Wilson in a grey knitted dress, Mrs. William B. Aiken and Mrs. Clara Morris.

Mrs. A. S. F. Keister entertained a group of children, including Eloise Clark, Barbara Clark, Mary Wherrett Cawood, Jean Keister, Barbara Coster and Phyllis Keister.

Children Guests

Lunching with Mrs. H. C. Anderson, who played golf in the morning, were Mrs. Edward McCoy in blue crepe, Mrs. James E. MacCloskey in blue and white crepe and Mrs. Lewis W. Hicks, Sr., in red, white and blue printed crepe.

Jane Sloan in a pink knitted dress and Betty Nicholson in a red and white polka-dotted linen frock in sun-tan back style, played golf in the morning, and so did Mrs. R. D. Campbell and her guest, Mrs. J. I. Anderson.

Leonora Bothwell was there, wearing a green and white seersucker tailored sports dress. Mrs. J. H. Mering, Jr., in a powder blue crepe frock with white linen fagoting at the neck-line. Mrs. J. A. Bailey in a white crepe frock, trimmed with colored bands, and a smart white pique tri-corn hat, and Mrs. Wenman Hicks in pale blue crepe having a draped scarf of navy blue. Her hat was a large navy blue straw cartwheel model.

Seen At Club

Lunching under an umbrella were Elizabeth Hull in pink linen lace, her aunt, Mrs. W. H. Remmell, and Mrs. G. B. Ryland. Chatting on the terrace before luncheon were Mrs. Stephen Taylor and Mrs. Paul Hardie.

MILADY'S ACCESSORIES NOW OF SATIN AND TAFFETA

WHETHER YOU'RE trousseau-gathering or not, you'll have most fun when you come to accessories on your shopping list. With them you'll have ample chance to prove your originality, for the outcome of your pursuit for gloves, hats, purses, scarfs and such sundries will decide the fate of whatever clothes you've bought. At the moment, satin and taffeta are in particular favor for evening and daytime accessories. Just to help you fly in the right direction we hereby drop a few clues.

* * *

WHEN ANY new fabric is launched, look for it in dresses and suits, but also in accessories. Which brings us to the point. Some of the best looking satin and taffeta gloves, hats, bags and jewelry to go with dresses of these fabrics have been scouted for you. You'll find them in the accompanying sketch. For instance, the stunning round zipper roll bag, with two square handles, terribly smart. And the bulky, 10-button length glove to wear either for daylight costumes or in the evening. This coming season watch for low eyelet oxfords, like the satin model sketched. With a pair like these, with inlays of moire piped in gold, you have the perfect addition to formal town clothes. Incidentally, with the advent of satin, pearls assume a new significance again.

* * *

AT ONE of the most important June weddings, the bride wore bridal gloves of white satin edged in lace—a sartorial note which future brides will pounce on with glee!

* * *

TAFFETA HAS been revived. This coming season many of our smartest women will wear it in the evening. And with it taffeta gloves that match or contrast. They're exactly the thing to wear if you want to add allure to a town print, tea-time chiffon dress, or cocktail gown. For daytime, include a taffeta purse, or stitched sailor.

* * *

ADD THIS jewelry note: With a black evening dress, look for the new coral beads. That sounds deliberately mid-Victorian—which is as it should—the result being very 1933! Rustling taffetas are as completely 1800 as the period when corals were such a favorite with adults. The modern necklace (sketched) of braided seed pearls combined with coral is extremely effective.

* * *

MANY WOMEN keep their genuine stones in vaults and wear faithfully executed copies in public. Today anyone can buy exquisitely cut rhinestone (or diamalite) evening jewelry that almost completely fools the average eye.

WALTHERS TOLD OF IMPROVED HOME LIFE

CHICAGO, July 19.—(AP.)—There's a silver lining to the black clouds of the economic recession and its lighting up the shadows cast over the American home, the Rev. Lawrence Acker, Omaha, said in an address yesterday before the International Walther League convention. He said:

"American homes are no longer a garage where the owner parked the body for the night, and no longer a filling station to which one hastens when the gas tank of energy becomes empty."

WOMEN AFFECTED

Even women, said the Omaha pastor, have felt the corrective results of the present time. He continued:

"Thousands of them no longer want to be what man is and what man does; rather they are seeking earnestly to fulfill their God-prescribed duties in life, namely to be a helpmate to man to mother the world."

Here are a few of the other results the Rev. Mr. Acker ascribed to the economic trend of recent years:

"Improved family health and a lower death rate, leading to a sturdier race of people.

"An abnormally large enrollment in correspondence schools as young men and women strive for educations to aid them solve family as well as national problems.

RETURN TO THRIFT

"Death blow to extravagance and a return to thrift.

"A slowing up of the divorce mills by strengthening the home ties."

"A return of the family altar, thus assuring a spiritually minded family and nation."

In other days the Rev. Mr. Acker said food was considered indispensable in working for the Lord. But now he said the "When do we eat?" was disappearing as churches were becoming what God intended them to be—houses of prayer, instead of dining rooms.

State Luther League In Session at York

YORK, Pa., July 19—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania State Luther League today begins business sessions in its fortieth annual convention. Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, president of Gettysburg College, in an address last night told the delegates that the youth of today is as fine as that of any age.

The conclave will end Friday.

Delegates Relate Women's Progress In Homelands

CHICAGO, July 19.—(AP.)—The woman's movement was advancing to greater things, delegates from the Far East, the Near East, Europe, South America and the United States said yesterday at the International Congress of Women.

This congress, called by the National Council of Women of the United States, has brought distinguished women from 31 different countries into a conclave to discuss world problems.

Miss Lilly Kelly of the National University of Buenos Aires, said Argentine women now were in business and professions, and had the same legal status as men.

A vivid picture of the changed status of women was drawn by Miss Selma Ekrem, of Turkey, youthful daughter of Ali Ekrem Bey, former Governor of Jerusalem and the Agean Island.

From Dr. Marianne Beth, first woman theological student and first woman lawyer in Austria, came the statement that women have exerted very little influence in the changing world of Europe since the war—perhaps less than before the war.

Women got the vote, went to the polls, but that made only slight difference in the settling of the affairs of the state, for they had no platform of their own, she said.

Japan was represented by Baroness Ishimoto, leading feminist of her country. Within a span of a single generation, she said, her country had emerged from a secluded feudal state to a highly developed agricultural and financial nation.

The session was opened by Emily Newell Blair, former vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, who said women had much yet to do toward the betterment of human welfare.

It was closed by Mrs. E. W. Wijnaendts Francken - Dyserinck, of The Netherlands, journalist and feminist, who said:

"Your American men have recently formed a brain trust. You American women can do more. You can form a heart trust."

MELON PARTY FOR THOUSANDS

Thousands of children and patients in institutions here are looking forward to July 29, the birthday of Leo G. Altmayer, produce dealer, who will celebrate by giving a watermelon party at Leech Farm on the Washington boulevard, and also by donating melons to more than 100 other institutions.

Last year five cars of melons were consumed as more than 20,000 friends attended his party at Leech Farm, while 25,000 in institutions participated in celebrations of their own. Altmayer expects a larger attendance this year. He has given the parties for 14 years.

Actress Asks $750 Alimony—Gets $75

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—(AP.)—Temporary alimony of $75 a week had been awarded Irene Miller, Hungarian actress, today, pending trial of her divorce suit against Sam Fengel, wealthy New Yorker.

Attorneys for the actress asked for alimony of $750 a month, but Fengel's lawyers told the court Miss Miller's earning capacity was considerable and the amount asked was exorbitant.

Third U. P. Church Controversy Gagged

Discussion of all matters of a controversial nature pertaining to the Third United Presbyterian Church today was forbidden members of the church by a commission appointed by the Monongahela Presbytery, George A. Long, clerk of the commission, explained today that this rule applied not only to the resignation of the pastor, Dr. William M. Woodfin, but to all subjects which might be controversial.

VOTE OFFICIALS' RELATIVES GET RELIEF JOBS

Friends and relatives of election officials fared well when the 415 temporary jobs on relief projects were handed out last week.

The city, however, also made an enemy when it offered William Powell a job as a laborer at 45 cents an hour. Powell, whose wife is an election judge in the seventeenth district of the Eleventh Ward, said:

"They offered me a job as a laborer but I turned it down. I used to be a committeeman and have never done laboring in my life. I don't intend to begin now, even if I were physically able. I have been a business man all my life."

Although he is a judge of elections in the Seventh Ward, W. H. Thompson says he didn't get his laboring job because of political connections. He said:

"I didn't get my job because of political reasons; I am a former railroad employe and have not worked for two years. I have a wife and two kids, need the work, and work for what I get."

Election Inspector Albert Carnegie says he had nothing to do with getting his brother, Benjamin, a job. He says he wishes he could get a job for himself, as he has been out of work for some time.

Other friends of election officials who are now employed by the city are Frank McKinley, husband of Election Inspector Anna McKinley, and John E. Flinn, brother of Judge of Elections Walter L. Flinn.

NAZIS PREPARE FOR VOTE ON CHURCH RULE

BERLIN, July 19.—(AP.)—Rudolf Hess, Chancellor Hitler's general representative, today ordered all Nazis to register for Church elections next Sunday, which are expected to deliver German Protestantism to the Nazi government.

Followers of Reichbishop Friedrich von Bodelschwingh, whose appointment in May is contested by the Nazi German Christians, have been hampered in their pre-election campaign, for they have been deprived of press support.

Newspapers, on the other hand, have been ordered to print every day, including Sunday, on the first page what appears to be an election appeal, which asserts that "only those who unconditionally support the Third Reich are entitled to your votes.

The Nazis started a campaign to oust Dr. Von Bodelschwingh a week after his appointment. Since then the church conflict has included Nazi efforts to place party supervisors over church units and formulation of a church constitution in which both factions made certain demands.

In Dortmund, the Rev. Franz Bueltemier, opponent of the Nazis, was prohibited from joining a campaign meeting by police who charged he accused Bernhard Rust, Nazi commissioner for culture and education in Prussia, of lieing in an address.

A notice from the chancellory, meanwhile, said Chancellor Hitler was completely supporting the Nazi Christians.

Nazis Unveil Tablet To Rathenau Slayers

HAMMELBURG, Germany, July 19.—(AP.)—A memorial tablet was unveiled yesterday at Castle Saaleck near here for Lieuts. Erwin Kern and Hermann Fischer, who shot Walther Rathenau, the Jewish Foreign Minister of Germany, June 24, 1922, and later committed suicide at Saaleck to escape capture.

Several Bavarian Nazi leaders attended the unveiling ceremonies.

FRIDAY

DAY AFTER TO-MORROW

REMNANT DAY at BOGGS & BUHL

ALL PITTSBURGH knows what Remnant Day means at Boggs & Buhl, and eagerly waits weeks for the big day. The first Remnant Day on record was held at this store over a half century ago. Yearly, it has grown in volume and interest until today it is generally acknowledged the supreme sale event in this part of the country.

Here is how it's done. From basement to roof, the entire stock is searched for merchandise that should be cleared out. Regardless of cause—age, odd lots, surplus stock, etc.—it is put to one side and plainly marked with a RED INK price—a price that positively assures the sale of that item.

This year's sale—on the eve of rising prices—should be the signal for every shrewd sighted buyer to stock up on needed merchandise for at least a year ahead. For, with present prices down to their lowest point in many years, Remnant Day slashes plenty more off those prices. Get set to save—as you have never saved before!

planes commanded by Gen. Italo Balbo hopped off from Chicago harbor in Lake Michigan at 8:45 a. m. (Pittsburgh time) today for New York, first stop on the return to Orbetello.

The armada took off in groups of three planes, Gen. Balbo's own being first to get away. The others skimmed across the harbor and followed him upward in rapid succession.

After circling low over the "Loop," Balbo left behind him the Century of Progress and thousands of cheering spectators, nosing his flagship southeast along the shore of Lake Michigan.

OUTLINES ROUTE

Just before taking off Gen. Balbo announced he would follow the American Airways route east to a great extent, weather permitting.

This route will take him over Sandusky, Lorain, Elyria, Cleveland and Ashtabula, O.; Erie, Pa.; Dunkirk and Buffalo, N. Y. The Italians then will fly to Batavia and down the air route over Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Utica, Schenectady and Albany. From Albany the fliers will go straight down the Hudson to New York.

More than 50,000 persons lined the lagoon where the planes were anchored to watch the aviators take off.

Their glorious Century of Progress visit had ended as triumphantly as it began, and they were told that as great a reception awaited them in New York.

N. Y. AWAITS FLIERS

NEW YORK, July 19.—(INS.)—Roaring down the Hudson, General Italo Balbo and his air argosy will arrive here today to receive a thunderous welcome from America's metropolis and prepare for the journey home.

Shortly after 4 p. m., the Italian air minister and the 24 planes he led over the North Atlantic from Orbetello, Italy, to Chicago's World's Fair were scheduled to appear over Manhattan, circle the lower end of the island and drop to rest at the seaplane base east of Floyd Bennett Airport in Brooklyn.

Reception of the Italian airmen promised to eclipse virtually every other welcome accorded by New York to distinguished visitors save that tendered Col. Charles A. Lindbergh when he returned from his solo hop to Paris.

As the Italian seaplanes appear over upper New York, they will be met by the U. S. Macon, the Navy's newest air giant. The Macon will escort the foreign airmen to the Brooklyn base, where Army, Navy, Coast Guard and official representatives of the city will be on hand to welcome the visitors.

Post Fights to Regain Time Cut by Storms

IRKUTSK, Siberia, July 19.—(AP.)—His lead over his 1931 record having been cut sharply to three hours and 24 minutes, Wiley Post zoomed out of Irkutsk today towards Blagoveschensk, nearly 1,000 miles eastward, on the sixth lap of his world flight.

The American airman hopped off at 7 a. m. Moscow time (midnight Pittsburgh time) after remaining here since 3:35 p. m. (8:35 a. m. Pittsburgh time), while his advantage over the time recorded by him and Harold Gatty two years ago was whittled to a slim margin.

Bad weather, which caused him to lose precious hours on the jaunt from Moscow to Novosibirsk, again dogged him, and forced him to stay here longer than he wanted to.

He still had unfavorable conditions before him, however, but he announced he would land at Blagoveschensk — where he and Gatty suffered a mishap on the earlier flight—which lies between the Vablonovoi and Sikhota mountain ranges.

The Oklahoman might push on to Khabarovsk, his scheduled stop about 400 miles farther on, he said, unless bad weather retards him too much, in order to make up time.

When he landed here from Novosibirsk he was 16 hours and 34 minutes ahead of his previous mark.

More than half of his stunt has been accomplished.

RESCUER FINDS MATTERN

MOSCOW, July 19.—(INS.)—The Soviet air ace, Levanievsky, ordered to the rescue of Jimmy Mattern, American round-the-world flier, has landed at Anadir, Siberia, where Mattern has been stranded for many days, and planned to hop off with Mattern for Nome, Alaska, at 4 o'clock this afternoon, Greenwich mean time (noon Pittsburgh time).

A wireless message from Anadir said that the Russian rescue plane arrived there at 6:15 a. m. yesterday, Greenwich time.

Today's wireless is the first direct dispatch received from Anadir for several days though repeated efforts have been made to ascertain whether Levanievsky had reached that far-away Eastern Siberian settlement from Khabarovsk.

PLANE CRASHES KILL 4 MEN

ST. LOUIS, July 19.—(AP.)—An airplane grounded yesterday as too dangerous to fly, crashed today near St. Charles, Mo., a suburb, killing Irving Koenig, 21, and an unidentified man.

Milton Girton, manager of the Lambert-St. Louis airport, issued the grounding order. Koenig, a licensed private pilot, was preparing to land as the ship went into a spin.

MANGUM, Okla., July 19.—(AP.)—Two passengers were killed and the pilot critically injured today when an airplane crashed into the side of a fog-veiled mountain 28 miles from here.

The dead are Don Tinsley, of Shamrock, Tex., and Jarrett Todd, Jr., son of a former county judge here.

The injured pilot is W. E. Hearne. He was believed to have little chance for recovery.

Quezon Resignation Rejected by Party

MANILA, July 19.—(AP.)—The tendered resignation of Manuel Quezon as president of the Nacionalista Party was unanimously rejected today by the party's executive committee, leaving the Senate president, who is opposed to the Hawes-Cutting independence measure, in a dominant position.

Quezon, who has been one of the most outspoken foes of the measure, tendered his resignation as an issue of confidence, saying he was in ill health. The independence measure is before the Philippine Legislature for ratification.

NAZIS AT RITES OF SEA FLIERS

SOLDIN, Germany, July 19.—(INS.)—Elaborate funeral services were held today for Capt. Stephen Darius and Stanley T. Girenas, native Lithuanian residents of Chicago who crashed to their deaths near here attempting a non-stop flight from New York to Kaunas, Lithuania.

Following the ceremonies, for which the entire town turned out in mourning, the bodies, in flag-draped coffins, were taken by motor to Stettin, Germany, to be placed aboard a plane and taken to Kaunas, where a national funeral will be held.

Local authorities, officers of the Lithuanian Legation in Berlin, and honor guards of the Nazi storm troopers and the Steel Helmets attended the rites.

DAMAGED PLANE LANDED SAFELY

CLEVELAND, July 19.—(AP.)—A watchful airport radio operator and a pilot who landed a high-speed transport plane on one wheel saved nine plane passengers from possible injury shortly before sunset last night at Cleveland airport.

For 15 minutes Pilot Robert E. Coulter and Co-pilot W. F. Poe, after being warned by Radio Operator G. H. Adams, circled their plane over the port, trying unsuccessfully to let down the right wheel of the ship's retractable landing gear.

Then while 400 airport visitors, a doctor, an undertaker and two hastily summoned police squads watched, Coulter brought the plane in to a safe "two-point" landing—the left wheel and the right wing tip.

Chinese City Puts Ban on Dancing

PEIPING, July 19.—(AP.)—No Chinese can afford to indulge in dancing while China faces one of the greatest crises in its history, Yuan Ling, Peiping's new mayor, said today. He ordered all dance halls and cabarets in the city to close.

$5,000 VOTED FOR HALL SITE FIGHT COSTS

The County Commissioners yesterday voted $5,000 expenses to County Controller Robert G. Woodside for investigating and conducting a hearing into the validity of the contract to buy the town hall site in Schenley Farms.

Woodside had previously asked $20,000, but in a letter sent the Commissioners yesterday set no specific amount. He asked the Commissioners to present whatever evidence they could at a hearing to be held August 29.

Commissioner William D. Mansfield, moving that the board appropriate the $5,000 now and "whatever was needed later," withdrew the "tail of the motion" at Commissioner C. C. McGovern's request.

McGovern also recorded in the minutes that he had always opposed the town hall. A statement in Woodside's letter that he had approved it, with former Commissioners Babcock and Armstrong, McGovern declared "malicious, unwarranted and unnecessary," adding:

"I opposed it and took them into Dauphin County court, and would take them to Philadelphia and New Jersey if necessary."

LANGLEY AGAIN WINS CLEANUP PRIZE

For the best work by a school in helping to make the Pittsburgh district cleaner and more beautiful, the judges awarded first prize to Langley High School for the seventh time in the annual Clean-up, Paint-up and Plant-up Campaign.

With the honor went a $25 prize and a cup.

The contest, sponsored by the Life and Property Committee of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, saw 150,569 Pittsburgh and Allegheny County school children doing 1,998,770 items of work. This is the largest volume yet reached, according to Chamber of Commerce officials.

South Hills High School won second prize, $20. Third prize, $15, went to Oliver High School.

In the elementary schools, Obey took first prize of $15 and cup and Brookline $10 as second.

HERRON TO TOSS HAT INTO RING TOMORROW

POLITICS
State Casts Puzzled Eye on Pittsburgh
—By MARK SHIELDS—

HARRISBURG, July 19.—Politicians in Central and Eastern Pennsylvania, always mystified by the politics of Pittsburgh and Allegheny County, continue to cock a puzzled eye westward, viewing the preliminaries to the Republican mayoralty primary in Pittsburgh.

Mr. Shields.

All are interested, because they realize that on the outcome of the Pittsburgh battle may hang decisions in the state-wide campaign next year, when a Governor, a United States Senator (maybe two Senators) and a Legislature are to be chosen. Gov. Pinchot and his independent allies have quite as much at stake as have the organization leaders who are almost solidly in favor of Mayor John S. Herron.

The state organization adherents chuckle as they observe the difficulty of the anti-administration crowd in coming to some cohesive militancy behind a single candidate. This hilarity is found principally among the men and women who have followed State Chairman Edward Martin, as they figure a Herron victory would turn the city administration toward whichever gubernatorial aspirant they decide is "regular."

That assumption is predicated on the alliance which existed between the state leadership and Senator James J. Coyne throughout the last regular legislative session, when the Oakland Senator was recognized as the Allegheny County leader, and was depended upon for votes in the House, even though he was unable to deliver much in the Senate.

* * *

McArdle Something Of Unknown Quantity

Should some other one of the numerous aspirtants for the mayoralty win there would be no such comfort for the Martin group. They all resent the Coyne influence, and would shunt that resentment on to the State Chairman.

It is surmised that there would under any of the men so far mentioned be something of a rapprochement with organized politics, but it would not be beneficial to Gen. Martin and those immediately associated with him. Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell, for example, has been close to the camp of William S. Vare in the past, playing a prominent part in Vare's campaign for the Senate back in 1926.

That attachment was influenced principally through Mackrell's friendship with the late E. E. Beidleman and the late W. Harry Baker. Beidleman in the same campaign being a candidate for governor while Baker was the state chairman. But it was an attachment which has lasted.

Councilman P. J. McArdle would be something of an unknown quantity. James F. Malone was at one time in the Pinchot cabinet, but quit because he "refused to take orders," which organization politicians believe would not make him over-friendly to a Pinchot candidacy next year, or to a gubernatorial candidate the Governor might selevt—unless Malone was consulted and had a hand in picking the man.

The associates of William P. Witherow were practically a unit against Pinchot in 1930, favoring the Democrat, Capt. John Hemphill. They have also had their wars with Gen. Martin, and criticized him severely during the last campaign because of his dependence on Coyne, but their bent is more toward the organization, in a revised form, than toward the Governor.

* * *

Any Overturn Pinchot Velvet

Under the circumstances it might be assumed that the Governor would have no more to gain from one of this quartet of candidates than from Mayor Herron, a circumstance which may puzzle some as to the Governor's interest and his desire that Mr. Herron shall be defeated.

But to Mr. Pinchot any overturn is velvet. It means a disturbance of factional lines in Pittsburgh, whichever way the result turns, and organization splits are a requisite to his success in any campaign. He won in 1930 because Coyne was for him in the primary and because Coyne and former Mayor Charles H. Kline were for him in the general election, while other organization affiliates favored Hemphill.

Moreover, there is in the Governor's mind a thought that the primary may cause such deep wounds that they will not heal by November, and that a Democrat will win the mayoralty. He would not, of course, get Democratic support for his own campaign, but Democratic control of the municipal machinery would at least mean it could not be used to the advantage of an opponent within his own party.

For these reasons the Central and Eastern Pennsylvania politicians, whatever their affiliation, are keeping a watchful eye on Pittsburgh, and will until September 19.

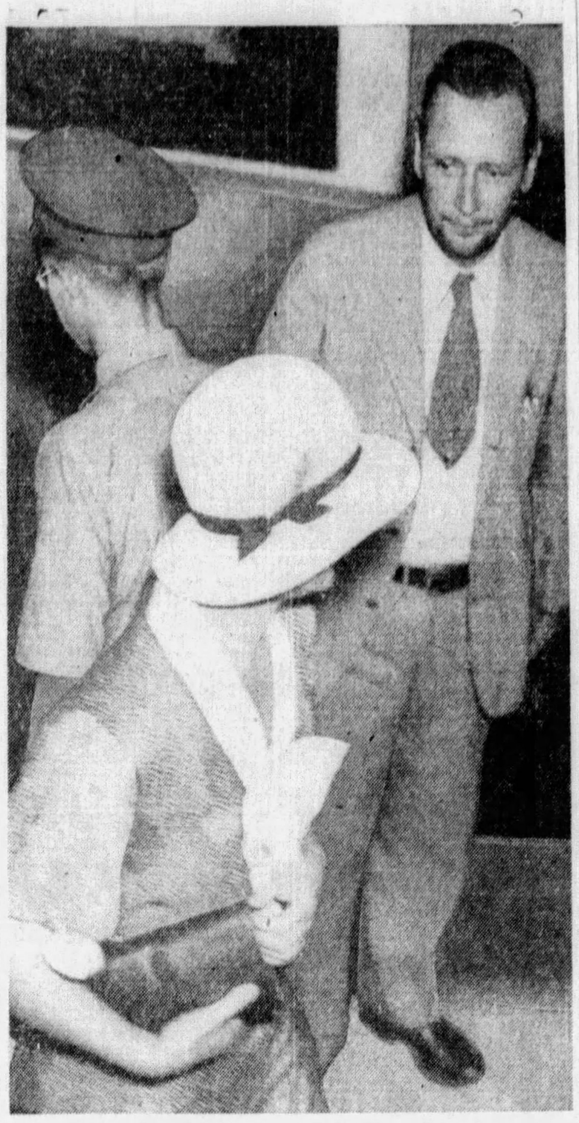
The only danger is they may become cock-eyed twirling their eyes to watch all the circus in its confused performance.

Contractor Enters Race for Council

Charles M. Schenecker, of 2208 Los Angeles avenue, construction engineer and general contractor here for 30 years, today had announced his candidacy for City Council on the Democratic ticket.

Schenecker was educated in Pittsburgh schools. He promises a "new deal" in municipal government with lower taxes and better service.

A Wife's Farewell



MRS. MURPHY LEO D. MURPHY

Prisoner Murphy, tomorrow leaving in charge of a California officer to face a seven-year-old murder charge, in the brief meeting with the wife who with their baby son will go to the coast to "stick by you." His beard is the result of his imprisonment in Pittsburgh during the past week. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

WIFE MAY HIKE TO COAST TRIAL

Even if she has to walk, Mrs. Lee D. Murphy will be in California when her husband stands trial on a charge of killing his second wife, she said today.

Informed there was a hitch in arrangements to have her accompany Murphy to Long Beach, Cal., the wife said:

"Regardless what happens, I'll be back in California when he goes to trial even if I have to walk. I don't care what he did, he has been good and kind to me and the baby."

Murphy was to have started with Long Beach officers today, but the start was delayed until tomorrow. Attempts were being made meanwhile to obtain funds for Mrs. Murphy and their 15-months-old son.

Murphy is charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of his second wife several years ago.

Democrats Meet In Crafton Friday

Democratic voters of Crafton will meet Friday evening in the Crafton High School auditorium. Speakers will be David L. Lawrence, Democratic county chairman, and Mrs. J. Wood Clark, county vice chairman.

Plans for an active campaign in behalf of the Democratic candidates in the county and state will be outlined.

Sharpsburg 'Y' May Be Absorbed

The Sharpsburg-Etna-Aspinwall Y. M. C. A. will become a branch of the Pittsburgh Metropolitan Y. M. C. A. the first of next year if plans announced today are successful. Frank W. Harbison, president of the Pittsburgh Association, said that favorable action has been taken on the application.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

SANTA MONICA, Cal., July 19.

Mr. Roosevelt, most of your plans are working. Recovery is slow, but is fairly sure in most all lines. But one gang beat the barrier. It recovered entirely, and is now re-covering on its late recovery. I don't think I need remind you what "industry" this is. I think a signal sign saying "slow" on a street called Wall, (placed there by you personally in order to let 500 essential industries catch up to them), would be appreciated by all other traffic headed for recovery.

Will Rogers

It wouldn't be so bad, but these are the same traffic violators who got too far ahead and gummed up our last parade. Yours, WILL.

POISON TAKEN BY MISTAKE KILLS TWO

Business Associates Victims of Same Error

Mistaking poison tablets for a headache remedy brought death to two business associates, according to records of police and the Coroner.

Isador W. Jacobs, 51, of 5246 Forbes street, secretary-treasurer of the Forbes-Murray Building and Loan Association with offices in the Plaza Building, and a friend, Louis Greenberger, 50, of 5933 Hobart street, were both admitted to Montefiore Hospital July 6 suffering from the effects of the same poison, according to police.

Jacobs died July 13, and Greenberger early today at the hospital.

Deputy Coroner John Danner obtained statements from members of Jacobs' family that Jacobs had complained of a headache before going to the office on July 6, and later told them he had taken the poison by mistake.

A report on Greenberger at the Oakland Police Station states that he had taken the poison, also through an error. An auditor who is checking the affairs of the Forbes-Murray Building and Loan Association declared that examination has not revealed any irregularities.

CALNEVA LODGE, LAKE TAHOE, Nev., July 19.—William Harrison Dempsey, one-time heavyweight champion prizefighter of the world, and his pretty bride, the former Hannah Williams Kahn, of Broadway musical comedy fame, were on their honeymoon here today following their marriage yesterday in Elko.

Dempsey said they expect to remain here "three or four days to rest up," and will then proceed to California "on a business trip."

The new Mrs. Dempsey said that she was "through with the stage," asserting:

"My career is going to be looking out for Jack from now on. I am going to stay home—you know, cook and sew and all such things. Of course Jack is a busy man and we'll be moving around quite a lot, but wherever he goes will be all right with me."

Mother, Children Fighting Deportation

Mrs. Bugla, 317 West Mainstreet, Carnegie, with her four children, two of whom were born in Poland, two in Carnegie, today in the courts fighting deportation action taken by the U. S. Dept. of Labor. The order: Deport the mother, two children. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

TEACHER HIRING METHOD RAPPED

Charging the Wilkinsburg School Board with unfairness and partiality in the hiring of teachers, about 250 members of the Wilkinsburg Taxpayers' Association met last night in the Wilkinsburg High School. Rex Newton, a member of the association, told the assemblage that while teachers from other cities held positions in the schools, qualified home talent was unemployed.

He asserted the School Board has refused to hire Catholic teachers, although a good portion of the taxes are paid by people of that faith. He suggested that if this practice were to continue, Catholics be exonerated from school taxes. R. B. Hutchison was chairman.

Widow 97, Dies In Wilkinsburg

Mrs. Lydia Thompson, 97, a widow, of 608 North avenue, Wilkinsburg, died last night in her home. Although Mrs. Thompson suffered a fractured arm when she fell from a couch a month ago, her death was attributed to old age.

Jobless Father of 5 Found Dead in Bed

Joe Popovich, 36, of 610 Beaver avenue, Aliquippa, unemployed father of five children, was found dead last night in bed at his home, according to a Coroner's report.

Mother Fights to Stay In U. S. With Children

Deportation Order Would Let Part of Family Remain

Mrs. Helena Bugla, 38, of 317 West Main street, Carnegie, a native of Poland and mother of four children, is fighting a deportation order of the Department of Labor. It provides that she and her two oldest children, Anna, 9, and Teddy, 7, must return to their native country, because they might become public charges.

The two younger children, Mary, 5, and Lottie, 3, may remain because they were born in the United States. Antonio Bugla, 43, the husband and father, was deported a year ago.

The mother told friends she would rather die than be separated from any of her children, and if compelled to leave America will take them all with her.

Mrs. Bugla said she is able to work and provide for them, and wants them raised as Americans, to have the educational advantages this country affords. She said she hopes to be naturalized if she wins in the fight to remain here.

She won a skirmish yesterday in Federal Court when Judge F. P. Schoonmaker granted a writ of habeas corpus on immigration authorities holding warrants for the deportation, pending a hearing next Tuesday to determine the legality of the deportation proceedings.

The writ saved her and the two oldest children from being taken tomorrow to New York for deportation. The mother and children were in court, represented by Attorneys M. Stancati, Elmer Wahl and S. H. Huselton.

Bugla and his wife emigrated to the United States in September, 1926, with their two children. After the head of the family worked in Pittsburgh and Weirton, W. Va., the family moved to Carnegie, where the two younger children were born.

The father worked as a shoe repairer until 1930, when he was committed to Mayview and became a public charge. After remaining there 22 months he was deported.

The mother, attorneys told the court, has done housework and other employment to support the children. Anna and Teddy attend St. Mary's School in Carnegie. The father served in the World War in the Austrian army.

The oldest child said she does not want to go to Poland, because she wants to continue at school and stay with her playmates.

COYNE'S CHOICE FORMALLY TO ENTER RACE

'Town Meeting' All Set To Launch Mayoralty, Councilmanic Slate

Coyne-Herron forces will meet tomorrow evening in the Fort Pitt Hotel to launch formally John S. Herron's candidacy for the mayoralty.

The gathering will take the form of a "town meeting" with Councilman William J. Soost, Republican chairman of the city, acting as temporary chairman.

Soost, under present arrangements, will give up the chair to J. S. Weller, a former state senator. It is uncertain just who will make the address of the evening—which will nominate Herron. However, indications point to Samuel Harden Church. Mr. Church lauded the Mayor at a recent testimonial banquet given him by the Homewood-Brushton Board of Trade.

Five candidates for City Council also will be formally named at tomorrow's "town meeting." They will be Councilmen W. Y. English, Harry Little, George S. Oliver, Frank L. Duggan and Clifford B. Connelley.

Meanwhile the city's so-called independent element is casting about for a candidate to oppose Herron. That candidate may be Councilman P. J. McArdle, Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell or former Mayor William A. Magee, according to the numerous rumors. The latest rumors have it that W. P. Witherow has definitely given up hope of being mayor and that James F. Malone will retire from the race upon the announcement of either Mackrell or McArdle.

CHARGES ALIENS PAY POLL TAX

A charge that poll tax receipts are being sold to non-citizens was made to the County Commissioners yesterday by the Rev. D. B. Bravin, secretary of St. John Legum Memorial, of the Pittsburgh Synod, Evangelical Lutheran Church.

In a letter he said he had protested to the County Treasurer's office, but was referred to the Board of Assessment and Revision of Taxes.

The Commissioners referred the letter to the Registration Commission.

George Meyers, chairman of the tax board, declared assessments recorded were the highest in history, exceeding 791,000.

As all business is to be budgeted under codes let's go:

Hitch-hiking: No double-jointed thumbs.

Hoss-racing: When the stewards find sponges up your hoss's nose, don't say, "He must have swallowed that in the bath tub."

Directors' meeting: We will be better off if you give them twenty-dollar gold pieces for not attending.

Banking: From nine to three. And no going back for your hat.

Wall street: Same code as Col. Moseby used when larruping the North. Get there fust with the mostest men.

Local politics: See no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil. And in Japanese, that makes you three monkeys.

Innocent Man Protests Auto Towing Charge

Not only was Michael Joseph, 56, a Monessen merchant, arrested when he ran his car off Saw Mill Run boulevard to take a nap, but his automobile was impounded and he was accused of stealing merchandise he had in his car, he complained to Detective Inspector Frank R. Boyd today.

He also said he was assessed a towing charge of $4.

Joseph writes he attempted to explain the circumstances under which he parked off the highway early Sunday morning, but that his explanation failed to convince Lieut. Albert Florig and Scout Car Patrolmen William Bradburn and Herman Scheidle.

So Joseph said he went to the police station and his automobile was towed to Wittman's garage, West End. Joseph's explanation proved satisfactory to Magistrate Patrick Riley in South Side Police Court, and he was discharged.

However, there was the towing bill of $4 which police said Joseph was obliged to pay, notwithstanding he was not the suspicious person police charged he was.

He paid $3.25, all he had with him, which he says was accepted, but he complained to Inspector Boyd that police protection was a "farce."

PLEA TO STATE REFUSED BY M'GOVERN

Col. Charles C. McGovern was asked yesterday to go to Harrisburg to see about getting certain Allegheny County projects implanted in the minds of state officials.

John M. Rice, consulting engineer, and James Rae, agent of the Commissioners, said the proposal had something to do with the money the state is getting from the federal government for road work.

MADE NO HEADWAY

McGovern might impress the Harrisburg people, the pair believed. But he thought otherwise. Said McGovern:

"I'm 'regusted' with that gang down there. It's like talking to a bunch of Mexicans. I went down to ask them about county roads. But I didn't get anywhere.

"I went to the Governor's office and he treated me with that Southern hospitality. He turned me over to Secretary of Highways Lewis, who gives out Pennsylvania Dutch hospitality, and he hands me over to Sam Eccles. With Eccles, everything is lost. He talks all the time and looks out the window.

FORGOT ANSWERS

"I took Commissioner Barr with me because he can ask more questions in an hour than I can. And when we got out we forgot the answers.

"All the highway department gives you is a lot of maps and books and other confusing things. If there are any developments I'd like you to go down. I see in the papers that Pinchot got some money because they refused him some more."

Engineer Rice interrupted to say Pinchot got $19,000,000.

McGovern continued:

"I got a letter from Pinchot, and, like all the letters from him, it doesn't say anything.

"Here, I'll read it. He starts off with 'Dear Charlie.' Now that's real friendly. And he goes on to say:

"'Now I don't want you to get set on any program. I'll do the best I can, but it won't be anything like you expect.'

"And he ends up by saying 'I know you'll understand.'

"But I don't understand. If you fellows can haggle and help the county get anything, even $5,000,000, the board will be satisfied."

The county is trying to get the Federal government to finance $10,250,000 in roads here, and loan $17,000,000 for self liquidating projects, for construction of the Homestead high level bridge and other projects. Rice, Rae and Churchill B. Mehard, assistant county solicitor, are handling the project.

PRISON WORK FUND GRANTED

WASHINGTON, July 19.—(INS.)—The Federal public building program was expanded today when Secretary of the Interior Ickes, as administrator of public works, announced the allotment of $851,000 to the Department of Justice for prison improvements.

Plans have been prepared for the projects. Work is expected to begin within a few weeks.

The proposed improvements include:

Lewisburg, Pa., prison — Chief medical officer's residence, $15,000; two at $10,000 each for two asistant chiefs; deputy warden's residence, $10,000; residences, costing $8,000 each, for chief clerk, chaplain, supervisor of education and $6,000 for captain of the guard's residence; guards' residences, $4,000 each, total $32,000.

BROOKVILLE, Pa., July 19.—(AP.)—An automobile trip to the Chicago World's Fair ended in tragedy 10 minutes after it started for Wayne McNaughton, 25, and Philip Croyle, 23, both of Brookville.

FUND TO AID GERMAN JEWS NOW $23,000

A $23,000 total thus far collected here for the fund to aid Jews in Germany was announced today at a report luncheon of the Pittsburgh section of the Jewish relief group, when Leo Lehman, chairman of the campaign, reported collection of $5,000 since Sunday.

Speakers included Louis Caplan, vice chairman of the drive, and Mrs. Saul Lavine, women's chairman. Caplan said:

"This is no time for protest—this is the time for action to relieve the distressed."

Thirty-one teams, aggregating 125 persons, attended.

Every citizen should be stirred to indignation over the plight of Jews in Germany, Mayor John S. Herron had asserted earlier in a radio talk over station WCAE last night.

Speaking in the interest of Pittsburgh's allotment of the $2,000,000 fund for the needy Jews in Germany, the mayor said:

"Every fair minded and right thinking person can not help but be aroused to indignation over the helpless plight of the more than 600,000 Jews in Germany who have done no wrong except to be born into that illustrious race from which present civilization has benefited so largely."

Mrs. Lavine today said she had received the written support of the Rev. Thomas F. Coakley, of Sacred Heart Church. The pastor stated:

"I trust that the grievous wrongs to which the Jewish race has recently been subjected will be speedily corrected, and I assure you of my own constant protest against the present persecution."

Policeman Burned Fighting Auto Blaze

He was taken to Mercy Hospital.

The office will occupy the first floor, balcony and as much of the upper floors as necessary.

The personnel of the local branch will be announced in Harrisburg today, according to Jacob H. Mays, state manager.

TEAR GAS ENDS EVICTION RIOT

CLEVELAND, July 19.—(AP.)—A defiant, jeering crowd of rioters, called into action by a "Paul Revere" ride of an automobile driver, early today evacuated Lardet avenue S. E. before the advance of eight score determined police.

Fourteen persons, including two patrolmen, were injured in the four-hour battle that climaxed a 17-hour siege started when sheriff's officers evicted the John Sparanga family from the house on which he was two years in arrears on mortgage payments. Aparanga has been unemployed for three years.

Gas guns and gas bombs popped like firecrackers as the officers drove back a crowd they estimated at 6,000 persons. Men and women, holding hands to faces, stumbled away. Some retaliated by hurling an occasional brick or stone or firing a pot or pan from the dark spots between houses.

McGovern Scores Summer Vacations Of Park Police

Park policemen on vacations stirred the ire of County Commissioner C. C. McGovern yesterday. He said:

"They sit all day 10 months of the year, enjoying themselves in a beautiful park. And when summer comes and the people go to the park to have a good time, and expect a little police protection and help, what do they find? They find the cop on vacation

"I think a little judgment ought to be used in this vacation business. It's an imposition on the taxpayers."

BARE BANKERS' WITHDRAWALS

CLEVELAND, July 19.—(AP.)—More than $2,000,000 was withdrawn from the Guardian Trust Company by officers, directors and stockholders a short time before it was closed, the State Senate's special banking committee was told yesterday.

This testimony, presented by A. H. Ganger, an assistant in the investigation, came on the heels of a statement by Irving Silbert, an accountant, that the bank loaned money to one present and one former high official of the Cleveland Federal Reserve Bank.

Silbert said E. R. Fancher, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank, and George Decamp, former chairman of the board of the same bank, both borrowed from the Guardian.

The Fancher loan was repaid on February 10, 1933, just 10 days before the Guardian went on a restricted withdrawal basis. At present the Decamp loans, Silbert continued, stand at $12,500 in unsecured loans and $16,500 secured by collateral now valued at $3,824.

TWO WOUNDED IN RUM CHASE

WOODS HOLE, Mass., July 19.—(INS.)—Loosing a blast of machine gun bullets while racing through a smoke screen, Coast Guards aboard a picket boat today wounded two men and captured the $50,000 alleged rum runner Whatzis, of New York.

The wounded men were found at the wheel of the 65-foot speedboat, behind a supposedly bullet-proof shield. Four other men were found below deck, and 1,200 cases of liquor, valued at $36,000 were seized.

The picket boat, commanded by Boatswain's Mate Alfred E. Paylen, sighted the Whatzis near Gay Head, running without lights and her decks piled high. After a 10-minute chase, the speedboat stopped and the Coastguardsmen boarded her.

Girl Thinks Man She Marries Should Wear Wedding Ring

Should husbands be tagged?

Should they be compelled to wear wedding rings, so the world at large—and the pretty girl in the office—can know they are Married Men?

Silly questions? Maybe they sound that way to you, but not to Cassie. For Cassie, who is engaged, has been looking around, and according to her—

"If wives have to go labelled, husbands should do the same. Mine's going to!"

To which her Hero replied, with equal heat—

"Nothing doing!"

So then—

Dear Miss Robinson—

Please help me. I'm having an argument about a certain subject, and I need some help.

You see I am engaged and expect to be married some time this Summer; or at least, I did expect to. Now I am wondering just how things are going to come out, because I think if wives have to wear wedding rings, husbands should wear them, too, but the man I am engaged to flatly refuses to entertain any such idea. He says he positively and absolutely won't wear one, and he gets angry every time I try to make him see that his wearing one would be no more than fair, since I am expected to.

I am beginning to seriously wonder whether he really loves me or not, if he is so unwilling to proclaim the fact to the world; or if he honestly intends to be fair with me after we are married.

IS PUZZLED

He insists that the idea is "silly," and he would "feel like a nut" with a wedding ring on his finger. But it is perfectly obvious, it seems to me, that there is no reason why a man shouldn't wear one (plenty of men do) so he won't be able to "get by" as an "unattached man."

Any man can pose as single unless he is decent enough to tell girls that he is married. Do you suppose this man I love wants to get by like that? Why else should he object so strongly to doing as I want him to? It looks queer to me, to say the least.

I'm to go around labelled "I'm married. Don't ask me for a date!" But he is supposed to look like he has no strings on him!

I love this man deeply, but his attitude toward this has gotten to be a very sore subject between us, and is threatening to come between us in a serious way.

Please help me to make him see that I am right. I love him, but if he won't do a little thing like that for me, what am I to think? CASSIE.

A POOR BEGINNING

What are you to think?

Simply that he objects to being bossed and suspected, sister. And you'd better think seriously about the foolishness of kicking up a serious mess over nothing, if you expect your marriage to "take."

Then I don't think his refusal is a sign of Criminal Tendencies? No, I don't. As a matter of fact, there is no law to make you wear a wedding ring, if you don't want to. But if you intend to leave it off so you can have men flirting with you, I'd advise you to wait a long time before you marry anybody.

I'd also advise you to stay single if you're going to suspect your husband of trifling just because he won't wear one, because no successful marriage can ever be built on such a cheap foundation. Nor can it be built on bitter arguments and hotly contested differences of opinion.

Marriage takes loyalty and confidence and humor and tolerance and sense, Cassie, and you're making a mighty poor beginning. So stop making mountains out of mole hills, and getting all steamed up because you can't have your own way—or quit, before you mess up both your lives.

Until noon, cheery-voiced solicitors with happy household hints encourage and sooth.

Afternoon brings in the hypnotizers of lonely housewives. Announcers and male singers grow so personal and confidential! All songs are sugary solo stuff about dream lovers.

Early evening brings general and timely entertainment for the alert-minded, who are relaxing. Then until midnight romantic dance music for listeners in love.

Given in Marriage -:- A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Idea of Veritzen's Scheme Known to Madge

At Lillian's vehement question concerning Philip Veritzen, "Don't you see his scheme?" I nodded.

"I suppose," I said slowly, "he wants to see to it that Mary meets King Georges again, in the hope that the attraction they had for each other will be revived at least enough to make Noel furious and jealous, and perhaps break off his betrothal to Mary."

"You don't know the half of it, dearie," Lillian quoted. "That old nitwit—pure Elizabethan English, m'dear—never has given up the hope of marrying Noel to Olina. I thought you had put the final quietus upon the plan last Christmas, when he came through with the triple-headed promise—to restore Noel's patrimony, to take Mary back into training as a future Veritzen star and to make no further objection to their marriage. Just what did he do about that last, anyway?"

"He left it all in my hands," I returned, flushing as I always shall at any reference to that memorable night, of which Philip Veritzen's melodramatic attempt at wooing had made so distasteful a memory.

"Ah, yes! You are the sole judge of when their marriage is to take place. Why," with patently rising excitement, "according to that agreement you could give them permission to be married tomorrow, if you wish. And would that spike old Phil's guns?"

"Yes, I know it," I returned. "I've already told Mary I am willing she shall be married immediately. But I asked her to wait a week so that, with all the trimmings, we could give her a pretty home wedding at the farm."

LILLIAN GRATEFUL

"And you with an ankle that will tie you to a couch for nobody knows how long!" she exclaimed, with the quick, jealous solicitude for me which is always hers when I am trying things beyond my strength. "Well! Here are three cheers for Ol' Man Depression! My orders for the next week can be filled in about eight hours. So bring on your wedding! You do the planning and issue the orders from your downy couch, and I'll have 'em carried out, or bite big chunks out of the surrounding atmosphere."

"You dear!" I said fondly. "Is there ever a time that you're not ready to lavish your strength and your time on other people?"

"Don't call yourself names," she retorted. "You're not other people. You're you! And as such, entitled to everything I am and have. Kindly remember, for instance, that your ankle was injured because you trailed that devil who had Marion. If it hadn't been for you, dearest, where would my child have been? But I don't dare even think of that night. It gives me the shivers. Let's get back to our little muttons—those helpless lambs, Mary and Noel.

"Let me get the exact low down, if I'm going to be Abettor-in-chief of this rebellion. Just what can Phil do to 'em if they do get married?"

"Not a thing, fortunately," I told her, "except be as unpleasant as possible. You know how for years he'd been holding back Noel's own money, left him by his mother, because of the technicality giving him control of the fortune until Noel was thirty-five?"

OBEDIENCE NECESSARY

"Do I know it?" she echoed. "How many times have I cussed Phil to the surrounding air for that reason. And I also know that he turned it over to Noel last Christmas. But—will the agreement hold water—that one he signed that night when he was emotionally uplifted?"

She made a moue at me which I loftily ignored.

'He did it legally shortly afterward. Noel is in full possession of his own income, somewhat depleted in value now, but not in nearly as bad shape as some of his friends. And unless he fritters it way himself, nothing can touch it. Then Mr. Veritzen took first option on all Noel's work as Boris Raminoff."

"He wouldn't go back on that, if he and Noel were at swords' points," she commented. "Anything that pertains to Phil's professional life is sacred. But what can he do to Mary?"

"Unless he goes back on his word, he can't deprive her of the chance of being a Veritzen star."

"Ah, yes, my dear; but one of Phil's stipulations in training anyone is absolute obedience to his orders. If he has told her to go to Paris, and she refuses—you see, don't you?"

"I see only too clearly," I told her. "That's the reason I'm urging this marriage."

"You don't have to do much urging, I imagine," she grinned. "What is Noel doing? Swinging by his toes for joy?"

"He doesn't know anything about it yet," I said, smiling.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Ringworm Not to Be Neglected

Dr. Copeland

It is probable that from now until the early fall I will receive many inquiries requesting information about "athlete's foot," or, as it is more commonly know, "ringworm." This disease has been extremely prevalent for the past two summers.

Athelet's foot, or "dermatophytosis," the medical name for this affliction, is caused by a parasite found at contaminated bathing beaches, public pools and gymnasiums. Contrary to a popular notion, the disease is of a serious nature and should not be neglected. I know of many cases that have resulted in serious infections which could have been prevented had proper measures been taken. When neglected the infection may spread up the leg and involve the skin and glands of the body.

Fortunately, the disease can be quickly checked if proper treatment is given at once. But too often persons resort to the use of patent medicines and other remedies. Cure is then delayed and is often made more difficult.

Bear in mind that infections of the skin are difficult to cure and what may be good for one person is harmful to another. For example, an ointment that is prescribed for one case of ringworm may irritate a more sensitive skin. It is for this reason that I advise sufferers from this disease to place themselves in the hands of a physician.

If you have been bathing at a public beach or pool and notice a reddish spot on the skin of the sole of the foot, do not neglect it. If it is ringworm it will become pale in the center and form a ring-like appearance. The outer part of the ring is raised, reddened and scaly; the inner portion is less conspicuous and the color gradually fades towards the center. The middle of the ring may be the same color as the normal skin or have a pale pinkish appearance. This eruption may last for several days or even weeks, when it will reappear elsewhere on the foot.

I am glad to say that every effort has been made by public health authorities to prevent the spread of athlete's foot. This has been accomplished by the proper sterilization of towels and swimming pools.

Another successful method of preventing this disease is the installation of a shallow pool filled with a special antiseptic. This is used by all swimmers after leaving a public swimming pool or shower. The person stands in this antiseptic pool for a few moments and allows the solution to come in contact with any of the parasites of ringworm that might be present.

Another protection against ringworm that I strongly recommend is the wearing of slippers when walking from the beach to the bathhouse. Avoid walking barefoot and you will minimize the danger of contracting this annoying and distressing affliction.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Entertaining

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been married recently—six weeks to be exact, and now I find myself with entertaining problems confronting me.

1—What time is proper for an afternoon reception and tea, when dinner is to be served at 8:30 in the evening? And should the reception follow the tea—or be before the tea?

2—What should I wear as hostess for the reception and tea? Would a very light blue crepe semi-formal dress be appropriate?

I expect 28 guests, so thought of having the reception and tea as early as social rules permit, so that I'll have a little time to rest before dinner. S.

1—An afternoon reception usually is "from 4 to 7 o'clock." The reception and the serving of the tea are at the same time. That is, after the guests have been received by the hostess they go whenever they wish to the room in which the tea is being served. They have tea here, chat with friends as long as they wish, and then leave.

2—This dress would be thoroughly appropriate and very charming for you to wear.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

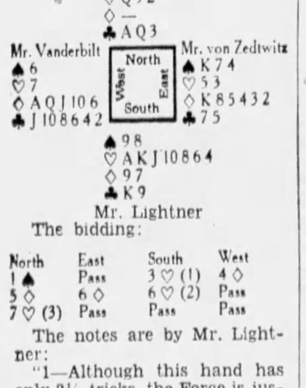
A Bad Guess or a Bad Play?

Why is it, asks Mr. Theodore A. Lightner, one of the world's ranking players, that the mediocre player usually seems to make the wrong guess, and the expert, more often than not, the right one? The average player, he answers, seeing that a certain finesse has to be taken in either one direction or the other, lets his fancy dictate which play to make. Thus the average player does not have at any time better than an even chance of success. The expert, on the other hand, is not satisfied to guess blindly, but attempts to draw every possible inference which may enable him to place the missing card, and nine times out of ten he finds some clue that guides him to the logical play of the hand.

The hand below, played by Mr. Lightner against Mr. Harold S. Vanderbilt and Mr. Waldemar von Zedtwitz, is a case in point. There is no safe way to play the hand. Any method might have proved wrong. But the method adopted was based on logical analysis rather than on a blind guess, and thus had a better chance of success than any other.

North, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♡ (1)	4 ◇
5 ◇	6 ◇	6 ♡ (2)	Pass
7 ♡ (3)	Pass	Pass	Pass

The notes are by Mr. Lightner:

"1—Although this hand has only 2½ tricks, the Force is justified by a practically certain game in hearts.

"2—It was perhaps better to pass, rather than encourage my partner to a Grand Slam. Six seemed certain on the bidding, however, so I bid for it.

"3—Certainly appeals better than an even chance on the bidding."

The Opening lead was the club 6, which South won with the King. A study of the combined North and South hands showed that there were three ways of playing the hand. One was to play only one round of trumps and then, in the hope that the opponent with the last trump neither was void in spades nor had less than three clubs, to play two more rounds of clubs, discard a spade, and ruff the two diamonds in Dummy. A second way was to finesse the spade, after drawing trumps. The third was to draw trumps, get rid of a spade on a club, and play Mr. von Zedtwitz for the King of spades. If all three trumps were in one hand, the third method would be impracticable.

Ordinarily the first mentioned plan would appear safest, as only an abnormal break in spades or clubs would defeat it. However, two considerations led Mr. Lightner to adopt the third plan. First, the free bid of six diamonds by Mr. von Zedtwitz, coupled with the freakish distribution of the Dummy, made a spade void seem a distinct possibility. Second, the King of spades was more or less definitely located in East's hand because Mr. Vanderbilt's four-diamond bid would tend to show that he did not hold the King. The possession of this card, with the spade bid by North, would weaken his hand. It is true this was only a shaded inference, but it was at least a straw. Then again, Mr. von Zedtwitz's bid of six diamonds seemed to indicate that he had, or thought he had, defense, if not against six, at least against seven.

Taking these two factors into consideration, Mr. Lightner drew the trumps and followed with two more rounds of clubs, upon the second of which he discarded a spade from the closed hand. After the third round of clubs there was no longer any doubt as to the location of the spade King, for Mr. Vanderbilt was marked with six clubs, at least five diamonds and a heart, and had at most, therefore, a single spade.

Taking into consideration the probable distribution shown by the bidding, Mr. Lightner drew the correct inference and thus made his Grand Slam, a result which could not have been attained had he attempted the best method on mere mathematical probabilities—that of cross-ruffing the hand—as the ruff by East of the third round of clubs, of course, would defeat the contract.

GIANTS LEAD BUCS IN FIRST GAME OF DUAL BILL, 1-0

BUC FUTURE STAKED ON GIANT SERIES

THE COMING OF the Giants today put the Pirates on trial. The six game series with the league leaders in a span of four days is by far the toughest of the season to date for the Buccaneers, and one that may have a very important bearing on the National League race. It's a test that may make or break Pittsburgh's pennant chance. If the Gibsons can grab the majority of the bouts they will put themselves close to the top and the contenders will be bunched in a way to make the race one of the tightest in years. But if they drop most of the games they will be pushed back a distance that will render a later recovery extremely difficult.

Bill Terry

And stopping Bill Terry's club in its present stride, and while it is getting the best pitching in either league, shapes up as a mighty hard contract. After pulling out of the slump in which they lost seven games in a row, the Giants won five out of six up to today, and in the seven contests their pitchers allowed only 11 runs, seven of those markers coming in one game. In all of the 11 contests played on the Western trip before the Pittsburgh visit, the New York flingers yielded only 27 runs, and 13 of those tallies came in two games. A big job, to halt a hustling club behind that kind of pitching, but not an impossible one if the Pirates keep up the stride in which they won 10 of their last 14 engagements.

IT IS THE opinion of New York critics that, with the season little more than half over, Schumacher and Hubbell have a chance to surpass some of the best shutout records ever placed to the credit of Giant pitchers. Each of these hurlers has contributed six of the New York club's 15 shutout victories, and it is contended that with proper support Schumacher would have turned in eight or nine.

Bill Walker, in 1931, was the last previous Giant pitcher to hurl six shutouts in a season, the mark that Schumacher holds already with almost half the distance to go. Poll Perritt pitched six in 1918, Jeff Tesreau eight in 1914, while Christy Mathewson registered eight in 1909 and nine in 1905.

PRESIDENT ALVA BRADLEY, of the Cleveland club, has the right idea about ball parks. They can't be too large in area for the proper playing of the game.

Bradley takes exception to Babe Ruth's criticism of Cleveland's enormous ball park. Ruth found plenty of fault with the layout, declaring that the Indians never could get anywhere in an American League race without making home runs as they used to do in their smaller former home at Dunn Field.

"THE CLEVELAND CLUB will play all of its games in the Stadium this year, next season, and, I hope, ever after," Bradley declares. "I think ball players can perform just as well in our Stadium as in any other major league park. If any of our present men cannot play good ball in the Stadium, we will get men who can. I can't see where the change in field should make any difference in the winning or losing of games. I think the records will show that in August and September of last season, after we moved into the Stadium, we played just as good ball as before. I remember that when we won at Dunn Field the other teams would kick about our small park, and that when we lost our own players would kick about what they called the cheap home runs made by Ruth and some of the other sluggers."

Lew Fonseca

BRADLEY HAS THE support of the manager of a rival club, Lew Fonseca, White Sox pilot. Fonseca agrees with the Indian owner that the Cleveland park is not too big for baseball. He says it's too big only for a lot of fellows who have been used to getting cheap home runs elsewhere.

"But a good hitter can hit in Cleveland as well as anywhere else," the Chicago manager adds. "I think there's no question that the Indians' park has hurt some batters, but I believe the trouble is psychological, rather than physical. They have allowed the size of the place to prey on their minds. If they'd forget it and go to swinging naturally, they'd still hit there."

JIM LEVEY, Pittsburgh member of the St. Louis Browns, now believes that Ty Cobb, Eddie Roush and some other former stars had the right theory when they held that much of the spring batting practice was not helpful—that it was a waste of time, as far as hitting was concerned, to go South and keep swinging at the ball when the pitchers were throwing only half speed.

Levey last year started hitting left-handed and rose to the best batting average of his career, .280. Hoping to continue the improvement, he went South with the first squad of Browns on the 1933 spring training trip and thus got two extra weeks of batting practice. The result was the direct opposite of what had been expected. The Pittsburgher is having his poorest hitting season and his average has tumbled to .179. Never again for Levey.

AS USUAL, THE New York Athletic Commission did not wake up and decide to enforce its own rules until something happened that should have been prevented. Following the unsatisfactory ending of the Petrolle-Van Klaveren bout last week, which was stopped at the end of the fourth round because a cut over Van Klaveren's right eye had been reopened, it is announced that boxers will not be allowed to enter the ring in the future unless they have recovered fully from previous injuries. It develops that Van Klaveren was allowed to fight through nine rounds in Albany a few weeks earlier with blood flowing from the same eye, and then was permitted to face Petrolle before the cut had completely healed. It would appear that somebody was lax in letting the Hollander go on with Petrolle in that condition. Van Klaveren's own handlers are not entirely blameless. Better a postponement than what happened.

THE GRIM REAPER has made still another addition to the growing list of Olympic Games figures that have been claimed by death since the world meet was held in Los Angeles last summer. Lieut. Clarence Von Rosen, Jr., has gone to join George Saling, Lieut. George Calnan and others.

Von Rosen was the young Swedish officer who almost won the equestrian jumping events on the closing day of the games. He was killed in an airplane accident in Sweden. American cavalry officers say that Von Rosen was far and away the best rider in the Olympics, even though he was not fortunate enough to win a championship.

GUSTAVUS KIRBY, president of the I. C. 4-A. body, and for many years one of the leaders in track and field sports, hasn't missed many big meets in his life, and remembers the details of the famous performances of John Paul Jones for Cornell, Ted Meredith for Penn and all the other high spots of the early days.

Paavo Nurmi

Many old timers refuse to go along with Kirby in trying to have the metric system made a fixture in this country, holding that miles, yards, feet and inches still are good enough for Americans, but they will agree with him in his choice of Alvin Kraenzlein, of Penn, as the greatest athlete in track history.

KRAENZLEIN WAS FAR ahead of his time. One of his records, made just after the new century came in, was not broken until 1924. In 1898 he won the low hurdles championship in the world record time of 23 3-5 seconds and took third in the broad jump. Incidentally, that's still hurdling. The following year he won both events, this time setting a broad jump mark of 24 feet 4½ inches. And that's still jumping. In his senior year at Penn, he won the 100-yard dash, both hurdles, and took second in the broad jump. With the single exception of Paavo Nurmi, Kraenzlein was the only athlete ever to win four first places in one set of Olympic Games. He did it at Paris in 1900, winning the 110 and 200-meter hurdles, the 60-meter dash and the running broad jump. Nurmi duplicated the feat at Paris 24 years later in the long-distance races.

BILL KILLEFER QUITS BROWNS AS PILOT

ST. LOUIS, July 19.—(AP.)—Bill Killefer, manager of the St. Louis Browns, today telegraphed his resignation from Washington.

President Phil Ball announced Al Sothoron, who has been coach, will act as manager temporarily.

President Ball, who is in a hospital, said he would take steps to obtain a new manager when he is released in a few days.

Ball had no comment on Killefer's resignation, but it has been no secret that he was displeased with the showing of the Browns, who are in last place in the American League.

Umpire Barr's decision started a riot, with 15 Giants swarming on the field. Manager Terry and his players tried to get the other two umpires to reverse Barr, claiming Lindstrom had scooped the ball. The game was held up for 10 minutes while the umpires conferred. After 15 minutes of wrangling, Umpire Moran decided that Lindstrom had trapped Fitzsimmon's liner. The Pirates went back to their positions, with Mancuso being credited with a run, Fitzsimmons with a single and Ryan was on third base. The crowd booed as the game proceeded. Davis flied to Lindstrom, who threw the ball in the direction of Umpire Moran after making the catch. He was not put out of the game. One run, two hits.

The Board of Control, for which audits were prepared, also announces that a deficit of approximately $11,000 faces the athletic department at Marshall College and that deficits, smaller ones, are shown in athletic funds at other state educational institutions.

Guarantees for 1931 football games listed in the liabilities of the Morgantown institution include $19,707.50 due the University of Pittsburgh, $15,000 due Pennsylvania State, $10,000 due Kansas State, and $8,224 due Washington and Jefferson. A. Spates Brady, president of the board, said: "the public must not be required to pay these items."

Primo Carnera's Life Story

Some Reminiscences—Odd Thoughts From the Man On the Throne—A Comparison With Other Ring Giants—Conclusion

(EDITOR'S NOTE: In swiftly assembling from numerous notes this autobiography of Carnera—nearly all of which was translated from the Italian, and some French—several interesting items were omitted, or added after its text had been completed, so it was decided to put the most readable of these into this supplementary article.)

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

LOOKING BACK—INCIDENTS IN CROWDED CAREER

By PRIMO CARNERA, World Heavyweight Champion of the World

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

While my feet and fists cause most gossip, many remarks—hardly at all favorable—have been made about my face, which shows many moods, most of them ugly, some folks say. Well, I ought to know much about my own face, because I like caricatures. In fact, I used to spend many minutes making sketches of all the changes in my "cave man pan," as critics call it. My model—and myself—was seen in a mirror. Such caricatures have been entitled, rather appropriately: "Nightmares." The laughs, the frowns, the smiles, the scowls—I wish I knew more about caricature. To be a good comic cartoonist would be much more fun than being a ring king.

Primo Carnera

Which "Nightmares" remind me of that broken nose, a souvenir of my early sparring days. Legend has it that my beak was "busted" by the kick of an irate circus boss who flung his foot at me as I was stooping to lift a baby elephant aboard a flat car, the runway having broken down. The same yarn says I tore the tent to pieces after that, smashed the big poles into kindling, chased the boss over the Alps, and thus was a sort of hairy ape fugitive from justice for a long time. This is an amusing tale, but the fact is that my big nose was broken from early battering by hard punchers in a Paris gymnasium when I was just learning to hold up my hands and swing as novices do. Long before the French public knew me, that nose became the only physical souvenir of my fistic affairs. No—Primo is without "tin" or "cauliflower" ears—as yet.

Another legend of my laborer days has the boy Carnera taking the place of a mule that died under the stress of carrying huge piles of tile and bricks. This story has me toting two huge shoulder-loads of tile the day I met Paul Journee. It is a fanciful yarn with a germ of truth in it. For when I had a job I often did work as hard as a mule or a horse, and many a boss may recall that I ate twice as much as such beasts of burden. I could do a full grown laborer's work when I was 12 years old.

Another of those amusing "monster myths" concerns the figure of the wild boar sewed on my fighting trunks. Fable says that is a memento of my tearing such an animal to pieces when it attacked some children in my boyhood days. In my limited English I already have explained that "pig on my pants" to witty American newspapermen. I wear it because, very early in my ring career, I once was given trunks with that wild boar on them. It seemed lucky, so I have stuck to that fighting symbol ever since.

When my troubles were thick in America during the spring and summer of 1930—and everyone seemed to be denouncing me as a "fraud" and a "freak"—cables came from France announcing that I was called for military service there. That made amusing news for everyone but me. Clever journalists, with the so-called "sucker tour" in mind, described me as a candidate for "the tank corps," and others said I should be put in the submarine service where expert "diving" is so important. Yes, I could see the humor of such stories, all right, when they were read to me by Monsieur See, but there was a serious side to them, too. The French military authorities really wanted me on the strength of what was said to me to be first citizenship application.

My difficulties with the French army officials date back a few years to the time when I was a laborer, and later a circus attraction, in France. In order to work in that country, it was necessary to signify intentions of becoming a citizen. Just then I had to work—or starve—in France. I loved Italy most, but there was no work for me at home. So papers were made out for me and—had I not taken up boxing—Primo might be pushing a tank or carrying a cannon (so humorists might say) in a French uniform today. I am sorry about this matter because I like France and the French people very much. But Italy is my own native country, to which I have presented the world championship and in whose name I will defend it to the limit.

It is to be doubted that any fighter in history was more spurred on to win by publicity than I was. Most of the famous experts thought little of me from the start. I knew that because I had many of their writings translated to me by handlers and friends. Next to winning the championship itself, I wanted to show the ring critics that they were wrong about me, but in most cases that was more difficult than the job of defeating Sharkey . . . At times I am gloomy like other people, but Monsieur See often said:

"Don't worry, Primo. You know a wise old Arab once wrote: 'The dogs bark; the caravan moves on.' And so it will be with the Carnera caravan."

That helped cheer me up and make me more determined than ever to fight to the top.

You can be sure that Monsier See and I meant no meanness of a personal kind in referring to those who barked at us as "dogs." They were very human in howling at us, because we were doing what they thought was not wise and good. (By the way, I am very fond of dogs—particularly a certain Russian wolfhound, my favorite pet for years). After being called an "elephant," a "whale," a "wild horse" and many other forms of brute, Primo would be proud if I had all the qualities that a good dog has—even the barking part. And now that the Carnera caravan has passed on to its championship goal, a big supply of bones (money) is needed. Guess I should start barking for some myself, right now!

Friends and some critics often have discussed other ring giants with me and this is my impression after such chats: Willard was great, but he took Dempsey too lightly after almost three years of a champion's rest and rust. Jess could not stand up under powerful punching by heavily-taped hands for more than three rounds. He was not as big nor (do I think) as strong, as fast afoot, nor as tough as I am when trained to the limit . . . Firpo was rushed to his Dempsey doom too fast. He must have had a wonderful right hand smash, but he had neither the schooling nor the actual experience I had before getting a crack at the title . . . Campolo lacked the stamina to stand up under many heavy blows, and, while Jose Santa could keep his feet under most such barrages, the big Portuguese is liable to be "out" on them and unable to defend himself . . . Stamina—the ability to stand up or get up under terrific punishment—is especially needed by so-called giants in the ring. I know that personally. Why some of the so-called "set-ups," and all the admitted stars whom I fought, dealt me many a shocking blow. But never yet have I been knocked senseless and the only time I felt like quitting was when my two broken ribs began to pain me dreadfully during the latter part of my fight with Jim Maloney at Miami, Fla., in the spring of 1931.

In connection with punishment, I was taught from the start to avoid as much as possible. So, in the course of time, I have learned to block, parry, side-step, fall away and "ride" punches when I think it best to do so and when I can. Learn to hit, yes; but first learn how not to be hit is the general rule of skilled boxing at which I am still a pupil. Giants as a rule—Firpo, Willard and others—were sluggers first and only boxers, secondly. From 1928 on, I was drilled to box first and slug only when the nature of the battle called for it. To be able to mix both—boxing and slugging—that helps to make an ideal champion, and that is what I hope to be.

If I am able to make a world tour, some day, I certainly want to visit Australia and Japan. Friends tell me the former country is keen for boxing and some fan "Down Under" (as he signs himself) has sent me newspapers from there with marked matter about me in them. My, what 'roasts" they gave me—why I thought, at first, my interpreter was reading to me from an American paper! Monsieur See once considered taking me to Australia, but the plans fell through—due to hard times, I guess . . . Then, too, I would like to see Japan, where boxing is not yet a popular sport, but where the average small man makes such a wonderful warrior.

Of course, if I were not "broke," here's one champion who would hustle home for at least six months to celebrate with a great housewarming in the new Villa Carnera. My parents and twin brothers, many relatives and the neighbors—Sequals must enjoy such a fete. But not for the present. Primo must take to the road—not as a tramp or a mere freak, but as champion of the world—to do honor to Italy, his own home and himself. That idea makes me feel very happy, though "broke." Now I really want to be home long before Christmas, this year. And I expect that will come a' out—Baer or no Baer, this September.

THE END.

GIANTS, BRUINS PIRATES SCORE VICTORIES

Associated Press.

The New York Yankees have regained the top of the American League standing very much in the manner of a team which is merely asserting its right as world champion.

By defeating the Chicago White Sox, 9 to 4, yesterday, the Yanks stretched their winning streak to nine games, the longest in the major leagues so far. The triumph coincided with Washington's 4-3 defeat at the hands of the St. St. Louis Browns and gave the Yankees a lead of one game.

YANKS' PITCHING IMPROVED

In nine games, the Yanks have piled up a total of 97 hits for 80 runs. While this clouting eased the pressure on their mound staff, the flingers have shown considerable improvement. Johnny Allen turned in another good effort yesterday and when he tired in the ninth he had a long lead to work on and Wilcy Moore checked the rally before it became dangerous. The Yanks rapped Ted Lyons for five runs in the first three innings.

The Senators made 10 hits off George Blaeholder and Sam Gray, but a couple of errors in the first inning gave St. Louis a head start of three runs that Washington never could overcome.

The Detroit Tigers backed Vic Sorrell's six-hit pitching with home runs by John Stone and Ervin Fox and stepped a game nearer to the first division with a 5-to-2 triumph over the Philadelphia Athletics. Monte Pearson outpitched Lloyd Brown as the Cleveland Indians scored their second 2-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

GIANTS WALLOP REDS

First division clubs of the National League all won and the race remained unchanged. The first-place Giants rolled up their biggest score of the season in beating Cincinnati Reds, 14 to 1. Starting when Johnny Vergez walloped a homer with the bases full in the first inning, they piled up 19 hits.

Chicago's Cubs remained 3½ games behind as they bunched hits to beat the Boston Braves, 4-1, in a duel between Lon Warneke and Ben Cantwell. The Pittsburgh Pirates, nicking Hollis Thurston for the last four of their 17 hits and three runs in the eighth inning, defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers, 11 to 8.

Chuck Klein's eighteenth homer was one of the few effective blows the Phillies could get off Dizzy Dean and the St. Louis Cardinals romped in with a 9-to-4 win.

PIET TO UMPIRE GAME

Tony Piet, of the Pirates, will be the umpire at the mushball game between the Tony Piet Girls, of Swissvale, and the Oakie Club Girls, of McKees Rocks, at Swissvale tomorrow evening.

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Well, folks, if you should get into a fancy conversation with Uncle Nick, don't be surprised if I pronounce my A's as broad as the Sahara desert. In fact, I probably would call it the Sawhawraw. And the reason is that this is a big year for Harvard men.

Nick Altrock.

No sooner does the Boston knowledge factory crown Al Smith with an honorary degree than the Yankees look around for some other Harvard man to honor. And right away they whisk back Charley Devens out of Newark and stick him on the Yankee pitching staff.

Our run-of-the-mill ball players don't mind tough pitchers that take a dirty stare at the batter and then sneer at him, but when you've got a Harvard man on the slab he is liable to stare at you in the Harvard manner and even look for the catcher's signals with his lorgnette. So this is such a boom year for Harvard men I am adopting my broadest accent, and who knows but when we next play the Red Sox in Boston, the Cabots and Lowells may have me up to supper?

LOCAL MERMAID WINS TITLE

DETROIT, July 19.—(AP.)—A Pittsburgh girl, Catherine Gibbons, won the national junior women's 100-meter backstroke event last night in the National Junior A. A. U. championship swimming matches. Her time was 1:30.

The Coyne A. C. team, of Pittsburgh, won the women's 200-yard relay. The team included Miss Gibbons and the Misses Viola Campbell, Emma Martin and Edith Rockett. Michael Brodi, of Duquesne, Pa., took third place in the 440-yard breaststroke, and Peter Choate, also of Duquesne, was third in the 440-yard free style event.

The Los Angeles Athletic Club relay team won the 400-yard relay in 3:45.6, bettering a 12-year-old mark set by a team which included Norman Ross and Johnny Weissmuller.

Dropping of P. G. A. Tourney Considered

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 19.—(INS.)—Nettled by the withdrawal of several leading members of the Ryder Cup team, officials of the Blue Mound Golf Club today were considering dropping the P. G. A. golf championship scheduled for the week of August 8.

The club had raised $9,000 prize money for the championship. Officials fear that the absence of such stars as Densmore Shute, Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen and Craig Wood will keep the galleries away.

The local qualifying round for the P. G. A. tournament is scheduled for next Monday at Oakmont.

LEGION TEAMS PLAY OFF TIE TOMORROW

Two important American Legion junior baseball games will be played here tomorrow evening, as a result of the 6-6 tie played by the South Hills and Swissvale teams in eight innings at Dormont last evening. It was the second clash in their series for the county laurels and had to be called on account of darkness, making the replay necessary.

If Swissvale wins tomorrow, a third game will be played later at Forbes Field.

Orr's home run in the final inning knotted the count for South Hills last night.

The second game scheduled tomorrow will be a clash between the champions of Cambria and Westmoreland counties, Johnstown and New Kensington, and will be played at Forbes Field. The Swissvale-South Hills score:

HORNE'S DOWNSTAIRS

SPORT VIGNETTES

The tag "boys' day," applied to Mondays and Fridays when youngsters under 12 are admitted to the Pirates' games at Forbes Field for the mere tax of 10 cents, is a misnomer, for girls also are entitled to the same privilege, which may or may not be news to a lot of people . . . Did you know that Jackie Fields, Young Corbett, Tony Canzoneri and Jack Sharkey have been dethroned as world boxing champions already this year, or don't you care?

Homestead's Lenore Kight will bid for five titles in the National A. A. U. swimming championships at Jones Beach, New York, this week-end . . . She is entered in the 100 meters, 440 yards, 880 yards and mile free style events and will be a member of the team, along with Anna Mae and Johanna Gorman and Louise Clark, which will defend the 880-yard relay title . . . Anna Mae Gorman will compete in five individual events, in addition to swimming on the relay team . . . The meet, which runs from tomorrow to Sunday, will give Miss Kight an opportunity to demonstrate that she really is what has been claimed for her all along, the rightful successor to Miss Helene Madison as the world's outstanding woman swimmer.

Lenore Kight

Blair Nunamaker, of Cleveland, who has been giving all of those exhibitions around here recently, will defend his world horseshoe pitching championship, which he has held for several years, at Soldier Field, Chicago, as a feature of the Century of Progress World Fair, July 27-31 . . . Believe it or not, but Joey Speigal, of Uniontown, who had his back splintered in an automobile accident several months ago, has completely recovered and has been given his doctor's o. k. to resume training and will be seen in action in the rings again shortly.

Both Vince Dundee and Ben Jeby, claimants of the world middleweight title, have had to cancel bouts, the former with Vince Dundee here and the latter with Lou Brouillard in New York, because of injured ankles . . . Why not match them for the "I hurted my ankle" championship? . . . The recent death in a charity ward in Chicago of Bob Armstrong, famous Negro heavyweight of the '90s, recalls the night Jim Jeffries came East to box two opponents 10 rounds each in New York and Armstrong and Steve O'Donnell were named to meet him . . . Jeff hit Armstrong on the top of the head and broke his left thumb in the first round and Armstrong went the limit and the O'Donnell bout was called off . . . Armstrong later gained some fame as a trainer of boxers.

The Pennsylvania State Open golf championship tournament, which will be played at Scranton this week-end, dates back to 1912, and numbers many famous players among its winners . . . Such names as Tom Anderson, MacDonald Smith, Jock Hutchison, Cyril Walker, Emmett French, Joe Turnesa, Tommy Armour and Ed Dudley are in the list . . . Vincent Eldred, of Highland, is the defending champion, and the tournament is being played over the home course of Felix Serafin, the 1931 champion . . . Dutch Loeffler, the Oakmont pro, has won the event twice, in 1920 and 1922, and is in the field again.

The world mile record has been cut almost 10 seconds in the 40 years between the time Tommy Coneff ran the distance in 1893 and Jack Lovelock turned in his 4:07.6 mark last Saturday . . . Coneff's first record was 4:17.4 . . . Jack Pallat, who recently was knocked cold in two rounds by Lloyd Clements at the North Braddock Bowl, boxes Charley Retzlaff in Chicago tomorrow night.—HARRY KECK.

LOCAL TENNIS FIELD GROWS

Another net league has embarked upon active career hereabouts to join force with the bi-divisional Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club loop, the Allegheny-Kiski Valley circuit, the Beaver Valley wheel and the recently formed Canoe Club group. A. territory to 48. Matches are scheduled for each crew weekly. The card for this and ensuing weeks follows:

Adam Comorosky, star utility outfielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates, was lost to the Bucs for an indefinite period as the Corsairs entered a six-game series with the league-leading New York Giants here this afternoon. Commy narrowly missed fracturing his wrist as he crashed into the leftfield barrier in fielding a liner in yesterday's battle with the Dodgers.

An X-ray picture of the injury has been ordered.

The Pirates overcame an 8-to-2 lead against the Dodgers to win the final contest of the series, 11-8. The Pirates scored three runs in the fifth, three more in the sixth and another trio in the eighth to sew up the game for a clean sweep.

Waite Hoyt, the third pitcher used by the Bucs, hurled shutout ball for the last four innings to receive credit for the victory. The Pirates hit four Brooklyn pitchers for 17 blows.

PROFIT-TAKING COOLS ARDOR OF MARKETS

NEW YORK, July 19.—(AP.)—Stocks and staples hesitated today as profit-taking breezes tended to cool the recently heated ardor of most of the markets.

Share trading, especially, received a jolt when leading distillery issues slumped 3 to around 17 points on an avalanche of selling, which apparently followed the old rule of realizing on the "good news." Gold mining shares also turned heavy, as did several other specialties. Wheat was off a cent; corn more a bushel and other grains were easier. Cotton and other leading commodities were slightly lower and silver futures sagged. The dollar was a bit steadier in foreign exchange markets. Bonds continued to plod upward.

The turnover in stocks tended to dry up on the decline. Notwithstanding the fact that Arkansas and Alabama voted for repeal of prohibition, the "repeal" shares were thrown over in large volume from the start. American Commercial Alcohol opened with a block of 5,000 shares, down 2¾ points. It later extended its loss to more than 17. National Distillers was off about 14, Commercial Solvents 8 and Standard Brands, Crown Cork, Anchor Cap and other allied alcohol issues dropped 3 to 5 or more. Westinghouse, U. S. Steel, Du Pont, American Can, Case, American Smelting, U. S. Smelting, Alaska Juneau, McIntyre Porcupine and Dome gave up 1 to around 4. Some of the utilities and rails improved.

In addition to various commission houses warning customers to expect a sizeable "corrective reaction" and advising the cashing in of some of the substantial profits which have been piling up in the past several weeks, it was learned today that margin requirements have been raised drastically. In some of the fast-moving specialties margins of 50 to 100 per cent are now demanded by many firms and in a few of the more volatile alcohol and whisky issues several firms have been insisting on cash transactions exclusively.

While market followers were inclined to adopt a more cautious attitude toward the recent "high tiers," sentiment as a whole indicated belief that still better days were in store for business generally. Even the most radical proponents of the advance, however, expressed hopes that there would be a slowing down of the rather wild speculation of the past several weeks which has revived conflicting recollections of the 1929 boom days.

Relative firmness of the rails and copper stocks was believed to reflect the continued improvement in both these lines. While copper was still quoted at 9 cents a pound, most of the larger producers were said to be asking 9¼ cents on the theory that this level would soon be established throughout the trade. First June earnings reports from the railroads were highly satisfactory to holders of carrier issues. Both the Chesapeake and Ohio and Union Pacific showed revenues more than double those of the same month last year.

IMPORT THREAT HITS GRAINS

CHICAGO, July 19.—Severe setbacks of more than 13 cents a bushel in wheat prices took place late today, with 3 cents drop in corn, 2 cents in oats, 6 cents in rye and 5 cents in barley.

Pit observers said the breaks in values were largely the result of readjustment of accounts after a period of nine days of incessant speculative buying on the part of the general public which disregarded marketing conditions and the relation of cash grain to futures. The markets snapped under the strain of overbought conditions.

Reports of big falling off in purchases of flour at Minneapolis contributed to the acute weakening grain values. Reports were also current that Ohio mills had stopped buying wheat, whereas until recently they had taken all country offerings.

The extreme fall in wheat was 13¼ cents. This was in May wheat which reached a minimum of $1.12 as compared with $1.25 to $1.25¼ at yesterday's finish.

The close for wheat was wild but at rallies of 1 cent to 2 cents from the day's bottom.

CODE CLARIFIES STEEL PRICE SITUATION

NEW YORK, July 19.—Iron Age says:

Finished steel releases continue to run behind those of last month, but mill backlogs have not been materially reduced. Pressure for deliveries is still severe, particularly from the automotive industry. New demand from that source, however, has declined, indicating that some of the motor car manufacturers are apprehensive of a reduction in their production schedules in August. Similar caution earlier in the year proved to be unwarranted and it is possible that present estimates fail to take into account current accessions to mass buying power from wage advances, increased farm prices and higher security markets.

Uncertainty in the automotive field is offset, in part at least, by the removal of uncertainty regarding iron and steel prices. The adoption of a code by iron and steel producers has clarified the price situation materially, causing concessions to disappear on virtually all products and overcoming lingering consumer reluctance to accept recent advances. Already buyers hastening to enter specifications against bars, plates, shapes and other products on which prices were extended through this month. Pig iron releases likewise are increasing, not only on account of the certainty of a rising market but also because of increased foundry melt.

LOCAL RATE HIGHER

The wage advances that have been put into effect by iron and steel producers, together with rising costs of fuel, scrap and other raw materials, have destroyed the last doubts of the trade about the permanence of recent price increases. Undeniably buyers have been purchasing further ahead than usual, but it is by no means established that they have accumulated excessive inventories. A survey of a large number of representative iron and steel users by the Iron Age discloses that in most cases increased consumption has paralleled increased purchases of materials.

Steel production has apparently gone about as far as it can without the support of the heavy industries. While ingot output has increased from 49 to 50 per cent at Pittsburgh and from 40 to 41 per cent in Eastern Pennsylvania, there have been recessions in the Cleveland-Lorain district, in the South and at Buffalo and the national average has declined from 59 to 58 per cent of capacity.

BUILDING VOLUME LAGS

Private building continues to lag, although giving scattered indications of incipient revival. Public work is not yet appearing in significant volume.

Railroad purchases of steel for car and locomotive repairs are gradually increasing, but the carriers are unlikely to abandon their present caution before June and July earnings statements have been analyzed.

Advances in heavy melting scrap at Pittsburgh, Chicago and Philadelphia have raised the Iron Age scrap compositie for $10.88 to $11.58 a ton. Furnace coke has risen another 25 cents to $2.50, Connellsville. Advances of $1 a ton in pig iron prices, now effective in virtually all markets, have caused the Iron Age pig iron composite to rise from $15.17 to $15.90 a ton. The finished steel composite is unchanged at 1.973 cents a pound.

Employment Gain In June Best In Year

WASHINGTON, July 19.—(AP.)—The largest increase in employment in more than a year was shown in the monthly report of the Bureau of Labor statistics. June figures showed a 7 per cent gain over May and an 11 per cent increase in payrolls.

Financial Topics

Industrial Production Statistics Suggest Summer Pause

Statistical data from the steel and electric industries brings the first intimation that the spectacular rise in industry may be flattening out preliminary to some measure of slackening which is normal at this season. True enough, as the old saying holds, "One swallow does not make a summer," but in the light of things generally, the first pause in the rising trend of steel operations after 16 weeks of expansion from the late March low of 14 per cent to last week's high of 59 per cent may hold much significance. At the same time, electric power consumption for the past week, while showing a gain of 16.4 per cent over the same week last year, fell short of the peak output recorded in the week ended July 1.

The pyramid in the alcohol shares collapsed with a detonation that could probably have been heard wherever speculation in those issues has been indulged in to any appreciable extent. There was utter confusion on the floors of both the stock exchange and the curb around the whisky posts, and for a prolonged period it was impossible to obtain quotations on the market for National Distillers, American Commercial Alcohol and United States Industrial Alcohol.

The wild trading in the stock market has led Wall street brokers to raise their margin demands drastically, it became known today. Under the new requirements it is no longer possible to trade in any of the fast moving securities on margins of 20 or 25 per cent of total purchase prices. The new schedules call for as high as 50 to 60 per cent, the latter applying particularly to the alcohol stocks, whose gyrations in the last few weeks have been as sensational as any of the wide price swings seen during the most hectic period of the 1929 bull market.

Impetus given business and industry by recovery measures probably has been sufficient to prevent the normal mid-summer slump, according to reports received from the various trade groups by official governmental agencies in Washington today. While production for the first half of July was leveling off somewhat from the perpendicular climb of the major indicators which characterized the past three months, there was a continuation of increases that gave officials substantial hope that activity will be maintained throughout the hot months.

Strength in the "liquor grains," rye and barley, checked declines in wheat yesterday when the market toppled over after hitting new peaks. Barley for delivery in December stormed upward to $1.02 a bushel, which is exactly 19 cents above Monday's close of 83 cents, and then gyrated wildly. The exceptional gain was almost entirely erased in a few minutes and then prices shot up again until at the close the malting grain was almost eight cents higher for the day.

Spectacular price changes in barley market were associated in some quarters with prohibition repeal elections in Alabama and Arkansas, but traders said fluctuations came about chiefly because a single broker who had an accumulation of buying orders with no offerings in sight, was able to bid the market up temporarily to a surprising extent.

METALS OFFERS RIGHTS

Carnegie Metals Company today announced a reorganization plan which includes an offering of rights to stockholders, payment of indebtedness to banks and individuals with stock, and the purchase of the Bode mine now held on a lease.

Stockholders are offered the right to subscribe for 3½ shares of new stock at $1.50 a share for each 3½ shares held. Rights will expire July 24. Funds secured from this subscription will be used exclusively for the purchase of the mine.

Banks will be offered 200,000 shares in payment of notes amounting to $473,376 including interest.

Officers of the company have agreed to accept 292,317 shares in payment of salaries, services, notes and for replacement of borrowed stock. This indebtedness amounts to $436,258.

The plan will increase the outstand stock from 237,880 shares to 1,070,460 shares.

URGES CLEARER ACCOUNTING METHODS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 19.—If the New York Stock Exchange in its campaign for better corporate accounting is to benefit the outside investor, it should insist on accounting which is genuinely revealing rather than on forms which are merely orthodox.

Mr. Rukeyser

The point is illustrated by treatment of the items of plant investment and depreciation and obsolescence.

Some of the listed companies, pursuing orthodox and approved accounting methods, kept steadily adding through the years to the net figure for investment in plants. Though the figures represent a large element of opinion and managerial judgment, certainly numerous large and well known companies carried such items on what proved to be grossly exaggerated figures in time of acute depression.

FIGURES HIGH

That the figures carried were unwarrantably high is not merely my individual opinion, but reflected the general financial judgment as expressed by prevailing security prices. Accordingly, the shares of numerous respectable enterprises were quoted vastly below the stated book values.

Methods of drastic write-offs which seemed ultra conservative—and which were criticized as such during the new era—sometimes proved not conservative enough under the test of maximum depression conditions. Chief executives of companies, pursuing such accounting methods, confided this fact to me.

In the settlement of the Allied Chemical-Stock Exchange row, one important innovation was instituted. Orland F. Weber, president of the Industrial company, agreed to "include in the annual reports a statement of the gross amount in dollars of all retirements from plant account."

HELP TO INVESTORS

As far as I know, no other leading company gives precisely this information, and outside investors would be helped enormously if they did.

For, without knowledge of retirements and dismantlement of old plants, the investor does not know what the net gain may be in the depreciation and obsolescence reserves.

If the truth were known numerous companies pursuing orthodox accounting, really allow too little for actual net depreciation, and include in the depreciation charge expenditures which should more properly be charged to maintenance. The effect of such a policy is to overstate profits in the income accounts.

There have been instances where companies ultimately recognize their mistake by setting up a lump sum against inadequate reserves for depreciation.

RESULTS CLOUDED

Furthermore, some companies live up to the letter of conventional accounting by adding each year to the depreciation fund, but not showing how much of the current appropriation is set aside for the year's dismantlements, there is no way of knowing the significant net results.

Another common mistake is to invest the depreciation fund itself in plant or other new fixed investment instead of keeping it liquid and available as needed in emergencies.

If a company sets up too large a reserve for depreciation and obsolescence, it understates its earnings and its assets, but the practitioners of such a custom argue that the reserves themselves belong to the stockholders, who have been deprived of nothing.

ADVANTAGEOUS POLICY

They further contend that plants are only valuable as long as the management can succeed under competition, and that they should be written off to a dollar. Such a policy gives an established concern, with its plant and equipment written down, a big potential advantage over a new competitor, which must charge off actual depreciation against the cost of competing goods. Once a plant has been written off, management can decide whether it is profitable to substitute a more modern structure, subject to heavier depreciation and obsolescence charges. Unless efficiency is high, there is no advantage in substituting the new for the old under such conditions.

Perhaps in this zestful period the public is adamant to the science of accounting, but in the long run the informed investor fares better than the sucker who believes all and who knows nothing.

COPPER MARKET FIRMING UP

NEW YORK, July 19.—(AP.)—Copper, though quotably unchanged at 9 cents a pound in the domestic market, cannot be bought in substantial quantities at that figure, trade interests said today.

Most of the larger producers were said to be asking 9¼ cents, anticipating the early establishment of that level throughout the trade. Reports that resale copper was available at 9 cents a pound could not be confirmed, according to some brokers who were seeking metal at that price.

The market's strengthened tone is attributed to a further advance in the export market and to prospects of increased domestic buying for all requirements.

Gripping Story of Life Behind The Scenes at Hollywood

By ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

CHAPTER VI.

Cavanaugh was stabbed during Leni's recital with acute pain. He was not particularly a sensitive man, but he had felt every pang of her heart transferred to his own.

"Tough!" he muttered cryptically.

"Tomorrow it will all be in the newspapers," said Leni, her voice tight. "No star is big enough to survive such an exposure of her private life. My pictures will be barred from every theater in America. I will be deported perhaps—utterly ruined. Tonight I am a star—tomorrow. I am dragged in the mud."

The brow of Cavanaugh became a black cliff with two steady eyes looking out from under. "Kruger can be handled," he said quietly.

"I would pay him money, but he wants more than money," Leni said. A shiver ran through her and concentrated in her heart. "I'll not surrender," she declared.

Cavanaugh understood and began to burn inwardly. A man like Kruger, he decided, should be stepped upon—like a spider. But it was no good uttering threats, silly promises to Leni Luneska.

Under his gaze he saw her courage melt and resolve itself into two glistening tears that hung upon her lashes. It was a sight that made him forget that he was a gambler, a cynical man-of-the-world to whom beautiful women were delightful playthings. His heart suddenly was beating quickly.

Without thinking about himself at all, Cavanaugh was moved by a compelling impulse. He moved over to Leni and sat beside her. His arms naturally and without volition went around her. With equal naturalness she snuggled against his body as little tremors of sobbing shook her. There was nothing of passion in their embrace. She was like a small, hurt animal seeking shelter.

SORRY FOR HER

The things he said to her were disjointed murmurs of consolation. "Don't cry . . . please . . . everything is all right."

He laid his palm flat against her hot cheek. With his handkerchief he wiped the wetness away from her eyes. He patted her back as he would have patted a dog. Leni began to relax quietly. He smiled at her.

"I've a hunch everything is going to be all right," he said. "And when I have a real hunch it never fails."

"Let me rest," she said from out the fatigue of her soul.

The ache of her words drove like an arrow into his breast. No other woman ever had the power to wound him with her troubles. He was a man living in a man's world—but a new door had opened. Something confused and embarrased annoyed him and his brain revolted at the thought he was becoming a tender-hearted sap. Deliberately he took his arms from around Leni.

"Nobody ever won any bets by being sentimental," he said briskly. "You're just a little groggy from the shock. Don't worry. There'll be a way to put the muffler on your friend, Mr. Kruger."

LENI OBJECTS

He spoke rapidly in a matter-of-fact attempt to regain possession of his old familiar self. Leni appeared to re-act to his mood.

"Forgive me for making such an exhibition of myself," she said. "What did you call me—groggy? That's right. It does not matter. You found me off balance. I'm sorry."

She smiled with a trace of her former poise.

"Will you take me back to my box, please?"

They stood up together.

"And meanwhile, I'll see Kruger and ——"

"Please do nothing of the kind," Leni interrupted. "There is nothing you can do. It is my affair and my penalty. You're awfully good, Mr. Lucky Cavanaugh, but don't be so foolish as to mix up into other people's troubles."

She gathered her cloak around her shoulders and smiled bravely. Her face was no longer tear-stained and miserable. Once more she was—on the surface—the beautifully-poised Leni Luneska of the screen.

CAVANAUGH DETERMINED

A wave of regret passed over Cavanaugh. She was slipping through his fingers. She had told him her story in a burst of defenseless humiliation. Pride returning would put a frozen armor around the shame of her words. There was conscious arrogance, he fancied, in the erectness of her golden head.

Cavanaugh put his hands upon her shoulders and deliberately turned her until she faced him directly. Their eyes met. A magnetic current began flowing between them and, without words, they came together. His lips pressed upon her scarlet mouth.

The kill was unhurried and long-lasting. It was almost impersonal in the beginning, but gradually his heart became faster. An electric warmth that radiated from her acutely sensitive body crept into his veins. Something keen as a knife twisted in his breast. He felt Leni's polished and symmetrical arms wind around his neck as the pliant body yielded to the pressure of his arms. Her eyes were closed. When it ceased, he had the definite feeling of emerging from a rose-colored fog.

"We had better go away from here now," Leni said. Her labored breathing was becoming normal. "That—meant nothing."

With a scented handkerchief she brushed a patch of white powder from Cavanaugh's broad shoulder.

"You're wrong," he said, his face still flushed. "What is started must be finished. We've passed the point of pretending with each other."

Her hand rested regretfully upon his sleeve.

"I'm so sorry, my dear," she said. "I've no wish to be swept off my feet. Men are unlucky for me—even the very nicest ones. I'm through with all that."

"What is started will be finished," repeated Cavanaugh doggedly.

"Believe me, no," Leni told him, with a deadening note of consolation in her voice. "You have merely found me when I was distracted—defenseless in a moment of panic. Tonight I felt the need to confess—to unburden my soul to someone. It chanced to be you. When I was in your arms my will-power was freezing my kiss. Now——will you take me back to my box and forget about it?"

Synopsis

Attending the premiere of her latest motion picture, beautiful Leni Luneska, the star, is confronted by a shabby man, who emerges from the crowd crying "Leni! It is I, Karl Kruger!" Leni turns white. Lucky Cavanaugh, a gambler, saunters into the theater. He prevents Kruger from making a scene. During the performance Douglas Gates, Leni's elderly escort, proposed to her. In the office next to where Kruger waits, thieves are robbing the safe. Leni leaves her box and goes to Kruger, whom she married in Vienna when 14 years old. He wants recognition as her husband. She is given time to think it over. Cavanaugh becomes friendly with Leni and they go out for some fresh air. She tells him the history of her life.

Now Go On

His lips pressed upon her scarlet mouth.

The Junior Patrol Mail Box

Spike to the rescue!

We'll say that he is showing all Junior Patrol members one of the best and greatest ways to help others. Yes, sir, after his rescue of that little boy drowning in the river, Spike's a hero—there's no other word for it.

We'll have to wait now and see who the new boy is who Spike carried out of the river. Maybe, when he is more careful, he will make a good Junior Patrol member!

But it just goes to show you what can happen if a fellow isn't careful in the water—and on the water, too. Canoes, especially, can be dangerous, and it is best not to ride in a canoe at all unless you're a good swimmer. If there is no one handy, like Spike to rescue you, you may be in great danger.

We hope that all members of the Junior Patrol can swim, and if they can't, we hope they will start learning right away.

JUNIOR PATROL NEWS

There is a swell orange and black armband for every captain. Just send your roll of members to headquarters.

In many districts, Junior Patrol clubs are playing tennis and mushball, and many other new games, too. Some of the girls are having a good time with jacks.

There is still lots of room on the radio program for talented members of the Junior Patrol.

Don't forget, we want pictures and drawings!

Attention, all captains and lieutenants! Letters from Captains and Lieutenants who would like to correspond with other Captains and Lieutenants are often printed here in the Mail Box. Watch for them and start writing to each other! More fun, and good news!

LETTERS

Notice, all you letter writers: Starting now, we are going to start publishing an Honor Roll each Monday of the best letters published the preceding week! So make your letters full of interesting news, fellows, and you lieutenants especially.

Remember—the three best letter writers will be named in the HONOR ROLL Monday!

A letter today is from Edwin Gibbs, of 710 Airbrake avenue, Wilmerding, a new member. Edwin writes a clear, well-written letter:

"Dear Junior, Spike, and Snuggins:

"Please send me a membership card and button. I have signed the Junior Patrol pledge and you will find it with my letter. As we have just moved here, I don't know any of the boys and girls in this neighborhood and I can't start a club but I want to join myself. I can play the harmonica and I would like to play on the Junior Patrol radio program sometime. Please print my letter in the paper and send me my membership card and button as soon as possible. I read the Junior Patrol news every day and enjoy it very much."

That's the right kind of spirit, Edwin, and we're sure it won't be long before you have made many friends in your neighborhood.

How about it, you Wilmerding Junior Patrol members? How about looking Edwin up, and making him welcome in your district. Maybe you can all get a club started right away.

IT HAS BEEN SUGGESTED THAT EACH JUNIOR PATROL SHOULD ADOPT COLORS, A PASSWORD AND MOTTO. That's a good idea, fellows, but we'll leave it up to each Patrol to do as they like about it. Some clubs have a secret handshake, too, and maybe it would be fun to work one of those out. Don't forget that the armband colors are black and orange, and maybe you will want to make black and orange your colors.

The rest of us simply do not like to think—and let it go at that.

CALM OBSERVERS' AREN'T SKEPTICAL

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

There has been considerable gossip over Mary Bog, eighteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bog, and Brown Marsh, a widower past forty. The pair disappeared Sunday. Naturally Mary's parents are upset, as they say they did not suspect any affair between Marsh and their daughter. There have been various stories circulated. But calmer observers are sure that it was a mere elopment, and they are safely married and will be back in due time to settle down to humdrum life.

ONE! TWO! THREE! BEND!

The grimmest tortures yet devised
In this too, too, inventive day,
Are those by which the oversized
Attempt to melt the fat away.
A tear must wet the dryest eye,
The hardest heart must feel some ruth,
When one beholds plump matrons try
To win again the lines of youth.
What pain they'll face of trunk and limb!
It makes mere man in wonder blink
To see that from these ordeals grim
So few fat women ever shrink!

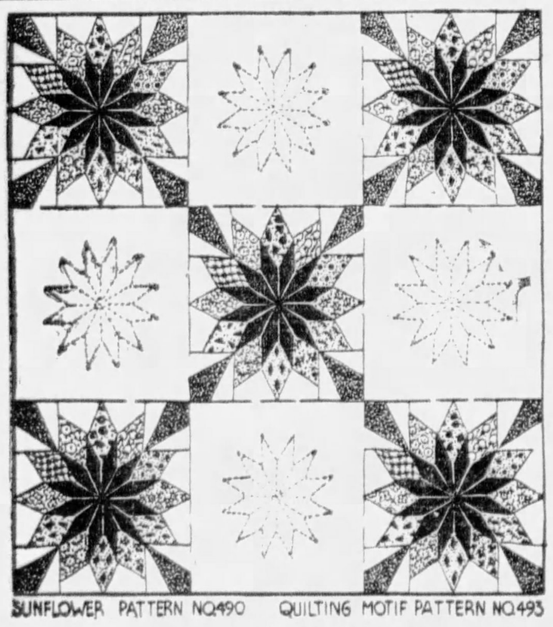
PATCHWORK QUILT PATTERN



SUNFLOWER PATTERN NO490 QUILTING MOTIF PATTERN NO493

By LAURA WHEELER

The sunflower, one of the most showy of our garden flowers, could hardly escape being used as a quilt pattern. Though it may flaunt its brilliant yellow in the garden, the quilt sunflower is most charming in its variegated petals. The quiltmaker of old, greatly favored this pattern and made the petals of the flowers of different scraps of material. The quiltmaker of today does well to follow her example, for the resulting quilt will then have all the quaintness of the old-time quilt. Pattern No. 490 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials. Price of pattern, 10c.

The quilting motif, Pattern No. 493, repeats the center of the flower in a quaint, quilting pattern, that not only harmonizes with the Sunflower Pattern, but many other designs as well. It is a transfer pattern containing 32 motifs 7½ inches in diameter. Price of pattern, 25c.

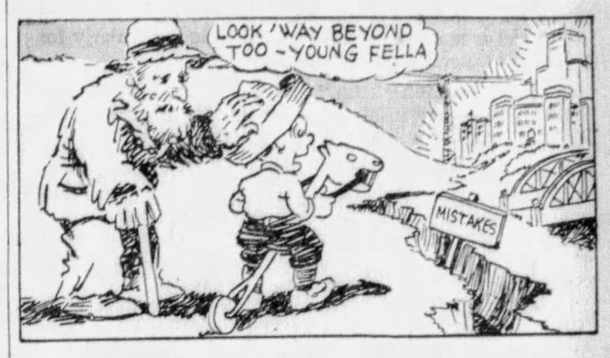
Europe flashes a flare for government of the minors, by the infant prodigies and for the kids.

All the leaders have capitalized youth. Gray beards and silver hairs are no longer the badges of service. The boys have taken charge and say they will not be responsible for the mistakes of their ancestors.

There's something to the argumentation. If your old man goes out and gets himself walloped by the next door neighbors why should you take the rap? Why should you pay war debts, taxes and indemnities? Very good so far.

The issue raised is that the coming generation ain't responsible for the going. We concede that everybody has the right to live his own life. Each generation should start clean on the balance sheets. No old debts, no moss-covered taxes and no long term bonds.

Sounds clear and crisp. But, suppose the old timers say, "Well, boys, we ran up a lot of expenses and you will have to take your share. We lost a couple of wars and blew a lot of money out of guns. But, we might have won those wars and made it worse.



"If you want to start with a smooth, unadulterated slate, we will play golf with you. You ain't going to pay for our mistakes.

"But, if you won't wash the dishes, you don't get any of the gravy. We booted a few grounders and the errors were costly. So you don't have to pay for that.

"On the other hand, we built schools, hospitals, roads, colleges, power plants, sewerage systems and public parks. We made every improvement we could think of in order that our children could have the benefit. We were working for posterity.

"So, just to keep the scales quivering and the figure correct, we will give you a chance to start even. You ain't responsible when we guessed wrong. But sometimes, we were right. So, not wishing to bother you with the past, we will tear up the roads, dynamite the schools, wreck the improvements, burn the colleges, blast the hospitals, destroy the records of medical experiments and tear up all the blue prints for bridges, conduits and battleships.

"Nothing that has ever happened before will annoy you. We will let you start where we made our guesses. And in order to make it seem okay, we will even throw in a few Indians for you to fight."

How about it, youngsters?

Naval Effectiveness

It Can Best Be Accomplished by Substituting Pocket Battleships For Floating Forts

It is a vital matter that the great expenditure contemplated in the new plans for naval rehabilitation should be made not only with good intention but with good intelligence as well.

Frankly, we stand in dread of the bureaucratic mind,—the mind that holds in exaggerated veneration what it knows it knows and is stony ground for all else, and particularly for every seed of progress and bold advance.

"It is astonishing," says John Maynard Keynes, the economist, "what a bundle of obsolete habiliments one's mind drags round."

This is tragically true of the departmentalized chiefs of the various Navy bureaus who are presumably to be entrusted with the design and construction of our new ships.

It is to be hoped that valuable time will not be wasted in bootless controversies, waged in a purely partisan spirit, as to the type and design of the vessels to be built.

The people want no marching and counter-marching by the die-hard votaries of this or that type of obsolete ship as against some other type of ship which is equally a back-number.

They want our new fleet to reflect the last word, the last flash of genius in plan and operating efficiency.

Let there be no clash of silly loyalties to this or that school of naval construction. Nothing should be done simply because it has ALWAYS been done or because it happens to be an item in the meagre mental furniture of some somnolent bureaucrat.

In the matter of battleships, let us realize at the outset that there is a NEW type of battleship in the world and that the ships that constitute our present navy are largely outdated.

The new ship to which we refer, and which is destined to revolutionize naval building, is the German pocket battleship.

It is cheaper to construct than the huge floating forts which constitute the reliance of all the navies of today.

It is more efficient in every respect.

It can get in and out of range with more facility than the larger ship.

It can strike as hard, if not harder than the dreadnoughts which it will quickly replace.

It is less of a target and has a better chance of surviving in battle.

Furthermore, it has been DEMONSTRATED to be the ship not of the future but emphatically THE SHIP OF TODAY. It is a new point of departure in naval construction—a challenge to every navy afloat.

Let us hope that our naval authorities are alive to these facts.

Neither time nor money should be wasted on the reproduction of a type of vessel which the last war showed to be in constant NEED OF PROTECTION, and NOT in any degree, a SOURCE OF PROTECTION.

We want no battleships that must be hidden away in some Scapa Flow and protected against lighter and more effective craft by chains stretched across harbor entrances.

Effectiveness ON THE SEAS should be our aim and NOT predominance ON PAPER.

'Phantom' Assessments

An Effort Should Be Made to Apprehend and Punish Those Responsible for the False Entries.

As usual, when a hot election is in the offing, preparations are being made in certain quarters to cheat.

County investigators report they have found 37 "phantoms" on the assessment books—fictitious persons, or described as living at fictitious addresses. It was the intention, of course, to have fraudulent votes cast in the names of these "phantoms."

The Board for the Assessment and Revision of Taxes has been asked to strike the false entries from its books. But that will not be enough. District Attorney Andrew T. Park should be notified, and he should make an earnest effort to apprehend and punish those responsible for the fraud.

Cheating of this sort occurs year after year. If the courts would commit the crooks to jail for a year or two, and make them serve their sentences, we might get a little relief from it.

Unlicensed Banks

James C. Chaplin Discloses New Angle On Restricted State Institutions.

Depositors in 35 unlicensed state banks in Western Pennsylvania have been wondering for four months just what is to become of their money. These banks are not permitted to give depositors access to their funds but they cannot be officially classed as failed. They are the institutions which were not allowed to resume business at the end of the bank holiday.

The State Banking Department has been widely criticised for its apparent neglect of these banks.

James C. Chaplin, president of the Colonial Trust Company and a veteran of several financial crises, has disclosed a new angle of the unlicensed bank situation.

He declared that most of the men controlling these banks have done nothing to bring their institutions into a sufficiently liquid position to permit reopening. They have been content to sit back and wait for the banking department to solve their troubles. Either through lack of sufficient experience or through mere mental inertia, according to Mr. Chaplin, little progress has been made in preparing unlicensed state banks to reopen except in a few cases.

The Banking Department would make a serious mistake to allow banks to reopen without enough liquidity to insure safe operation. The department should give closed banks every reasonable opportunity to place themselves in positions to justify reopening. Where this appears impossible or where no progress is being made in this direction, the department should proceed with liquidation.

A Monument to Porter

It Is Fitting That the Late Congressman Should Be Honored at the Narcotic Farm Dedication.

The announcement is made that tributes to the late Congressman Stephen G. Porter of Pittsburgh will mark the ceremonies at the laying of the cornerstone for the Federal Narcotic Farm building at Lexington, Ky., on July 29. Nothing could be more fitting.

Mr. Porter worked indefatigably for the eradication of the narcotic drug evil. He introduced the appropriation bill for the Narcotic Farm. He battled at the League of Nations conference at Geneva for an international agreement to curtail the commerce in opium.

The suggestion has been made that the new farm should be named for Mr. Porter. He deserves the honor.

Unbearable Burdens

By Nelson Harding

We can burst the bonds that bind us
To the burdens we have carried;
We can ease our aching shoulders
Of the crushing weights placed on them
By our stupid legislators.
If one great weight can be cast off
By a strong, determined effort,
Why not get rid of the other?

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Life of a Wisecrack

Every woman remembers the greatest compliment that ever was paid her, and I am no exception.

* * *

Perhaps the most flattering bouquet that I ever received was when some scenario-writer inserted a dear, old epigram of mine into a screen play made from the book of a famous writer, instead of the author's own immortal lines.

* * *

The epigram was, "A husband is what is left of a bachelor, after the nerve has been extracted."

The second greatest compliment I ever received was when a nationally-known sports writer devoted a whole column to the praise of a philosophical barkeep, who had chalked across the mirror above his bar, the following "deathless words:"

* * *

"It takes a woman 20 years to make a man of her son—and another woman 20 minutes to make a fool of him."

* * *

I am flattered that the witty barkeep liked that wisecrack; because I thought it pretty good myself when I WROTE IT, way back in the days when this column was entitled "Reflections of a Bachelor Girl."

* * *

Recently, a little magazine, which is usually careful to give full credit to the authors whom it quotes, published the following, without giving credit to anybody.

* * *

"The honeymoon is over, when he stops calling her darling—and begins calling her 'SAY'!"

Now that's a fairly good wisecrack—or at least, I thought so, when I wrote it, some four or five years ago. I wonder how it was palmed off on the editor of that magazine, as new.

* * *

The epigram or wisecrack, as it is now scornfully called, may be the lowest form of literary life. But, after all, like the cheap articles in the five-and-ten, it sells pretty well; and this column bears no sign "Take one. Free sample. Help yourself."

* * *

A wisecrack is not a butterfly, which dies in a day. It has a long life, and can be used (by its AUTHOR), in plays, in books and on radio, when it is old enough to vote. When the late depression took all our shirts, it left me some forty thousand or fifty thousand epigrams and wisecracks, to which ALL RIGHTS are carefully protected. And, if any more of my brain-babies are kidnaped and palmed off on innocent editors and writers as orphans, I'm going to SCREAM!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 19.—Brightly expectant sidewalk cafes bloom everywhere. The Brevoort now has one on the avenue. For years the Cafe Royal on Second avenue had the only outside tables. Bustanoby tried it 15 years ago on upper Broadway, but it did not click. Martin's effort, too, failed.

Today there are 27 in Manhattan and 11 in Brooklyn. And perhaps that many more scattered in nearby suburban towns. Coney Island has three going full blast and many more are planned. Roller skating, bicycling and terasse dining are, of course, symbols of the new leisure in living.

Five years ago the sidewalk cafe would have been considered a bourgeois gesture. New Yorkers were keyed to a speedier hub-bub. Now they seem content to sit quietly and watch Life flow by with the ticking variety of the topical events at the cinema.

With the al frescoe experiment has spawned the usual superfluous nuisances—the strolling musician, magician, bonnety old ladies who sell wilted flowers and even the hawker of strip post-cards. But they are minor annoyances. The real joy is that honorable simplicity comes to a muddled world.

* * *

Despite new simplicities a complexity bobs up here and there. For instance the post-card today: "Say Toy Boat quickly ten times." I telegraphed him collect to try the same thing with: "Entire Tire Territory."

* * *

Out of the shadows of East Forty-ninth street near Park avenue last night, a marrowy figure popped to inquire: "How about a nice ride to Coney?" I shook my head and walked on. "We'll stop on the way and meet some swell dames!" he called. So, I turned, irritated to be taken for a yokel, and talked nastily. He listened, seemed contrite and explained: "It's a tough way to make a living but I've done everything else and when you have five children and a sick wife—" the voice trailed off into a whispering choke. So I gave him a dollar and learn today it's a new racket. Pick out a fellow that will give you back talk and then make him ashamed! Nine times out of ten the dunce will loosen.

* * *

Faith Baldwin, who has about the prettiest of feminine writing names, is one of the most prolific and speedy fiction writers. Aside from two novels a year she turns out several serials, innumerable short stories and is a frequent broadcaster. Also one of Brooklyn's slim contributions to the field of modern literature. She is married, has two children and her writing name is not a pseudonym but her maiden tag. Intensely domestic, she is seldom seen at literary téas and other horrors of writing folk.

* * *

A close friend is a dentist. We launched our New York careers the same year and have kept contacts. Through him I met other dentists. My friend as well as his associates are about the cleanest living men I know. The dentists in our town were all high-grade citizens and excellent family men. There is no analogy between dentistry and domesticity, yet six persons I have talked to about the matter today said every dentist they knew notched high domestically.

* * *

Columns were written several months ago about the best frocked women. Most mentioned struck me as flash dressers with nebulous tastes. The dashing Lilyan Tashman et al! They mistake a lot of clothes for style. New York first nights and Hollywod premieres bring out the best dressed women. The most flamboyantly garbed get attention but are far from being correctly gowned. In New York, for example, likely the most perfectly groomed ladies are Mrs. Robert Rubin, Peggy Hoyt, Mrs. Byron Foy and Mrs. Will Hays. Their costumes have a sedate chic that may only be described as fastidious. A fastidiousness that would not palpitate those who admire the gaudier gown pretensions.

* * *

Howard Acton and I dropped over to Brooklyn the other sundown to see a couple of scrub teams battle on a sand lot. Baseball has not changed. Best players are still worst dressed. I had the niftiest suit but invariably fanned.

* * *

My superior fault—and many perpetuate the idea through life—was not standing up to the plate. I twittered at in-shoots but was a push-over for one of those leisurely roundhouse out-curves. I'd swing—oof!—and miss it a mile.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Too warm to think? Too bored to care what happens? Then here's a letter which is guaranteed to jar you out of your coma.

It is from a Modern Young Man. No, he isn't a sample of Flaming Youth. Few of them are.

WHAT SORT OF A WIFE DOES THE YOUNG MAN OF 1933 DESIRE?

Does he want the sort of a wife his father desired in 1903? Or his grandfather sought in 1873?

DOES THE YOUNG MAN OF 1933 FEEL ABOUT SUCH MATTERS AS HIS FATHER OR HIS GRANDFATHER WOULD HAVE FELT?

OR DOES HE ACTUALLY PREFER TO BUILD A HOME WITH A PARTNER WHO KNOWS THE WORLD AS HE KNOWS IT, EVEN THOUGH THAT KNOWLEDGE MAY HAVE BEEN GAINED THROUGH PAINFUL EXPERIENCE?

Flippant and shocking questions? Neither! These are the most important questions in our life, for they affect the very foundations of human society—the home.

Dear Miss Robinson:

Recently a famous traveler asked, "WHAT KIND OF A WIFE DOES THE AVERAGE, INTELLIGENT, SELF-RESPECTING YOUNG AMERICAN DESIRE?" Perhaps my answer may prove interesting.

Let me preface it by saying that I am 27 years of age, have earned my living since I was 17, had two years in college, have an auto accessories business, come of good family with fine ideals—to which I try to live up.

AND YET MOST OF MY PARENTS' IDEALS ARE USELESS TO ME, BECAUSE I AM LIVING IN AN ENTIRELY DIFFERENT WORLD.

This is particularly true when it comes to marriage. The home, in my father's and grandfather's time, was a social and amusement center; even an industrial center. A man needed a wife who was a good home-maker and mother. If she filled that job she had no time for anything else, and her husband expected little else.

BUT NOW BIG BUSINESS HAS TAKEN OVER MOST DOMESTIC CHORES, AND CO-EDUCATION AND EQUAL INDUSTRIAL OPPORTUNITIES HAVE ESTABLISHED AN ENTIRELY NEW RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN MEN AND WOMEN.

NOWADAYS A BOY GROWS UP WITH GIRLS, COMPETES IN SPORTS WITH GIRLS, GOES INTO OFFICES WITH GIRLS. NATURALLY, WHEN HE COMES TO MARRY HE WANTS A WOMAN WHO WILL BE A COMPANION AS WELL AS A WIFE AND MOTHER.

And what does companionship imply? It implies a knowledge of life. But suppose that in acquiring that knowledge a girl has made some unwise experiments, faced some bitter disillusionment—should she therefore be regarded as unworthy for wifehood or motherhood? I don't think so.

I WOULDN'T MARRY A VULGAR, PROMISCUOUS WOMAN; BUT IF A GIRL WAS SINCERE—IF SHE HAD LEARNED WISDOM AND TOLERANCE FROM EXPERIENCE—I WOULDN'T FEEL THAT I HAD A RIGHT TO QUESTION HOW SHE OBTAINED THAT EXPERIENCE.

And I think I speak for most modern young men. We like "good women" as much as our fathers did—but we no longer think that goodness consists in ignorance. And we've seen by bitter experience in our own families that a "pure, good woman," through her very ignorance and intolerance, may wreck a home; while, on the other hand, the woman who "knows what it's all about" often proves to be the most tender and understanding wife, mother and comrade.

I AM FOR THE SINGLE STANDARD. LET IT BE AS CLEAN AS POSSIBLE, FOR BOTH SEXES. BUT IF UNWISE ADVENTURES DO NOT UNFIT A MAN FOR THE POSITION OF FATHER AND HUSBAND, WHY SHOULD THEY UNFIT A WOMAN?

A MODERN YOUNG MAN.

Newfoundland Offers to Sell Labrador—Sir William Grenfell's Opinion—His Remarkable Philanthropy

By EDWIN C. HILL

IF you happen to have a hundred million dollars which is not working, make an offer to Newfoundland for its territory of Labrador. It should be a gilt-edge investment, and is made possible by the recent offer of Newfoundland to sell Labrador for that sum.

That great and good man, Sir Wilfred Grenfell, tells us that Labrador at a hundred million would be a rattling good bargain for anybody—too good to be true. Dr. Grenfell believes (and none should know better) that unexplored Newfoundland contains fabulously rich mineral treasures, and has advised Newfoundland not to sell under any conditions.

No man knows remote, unmapped Labrador so well as this good samaritan. For more than 35 years he has fought the good fight against the demons of cold, ice, disease and famine in the lonely and frozen wastes. He has shown the Eskimos and the Indians how to live intelligently, like human beings rather than beasts. He has taught the fisherfolk the meaning of Christianity.

Ordinarily man goes to the ends of the earth for gold, glory or the sheer thrill of adventure. But Wilfred Grenfell went to the bleak-ice-locked land of Labrador for the love of God and the brotherhood of man. It was away back in the eighties, that he heard a sermon preached in England by the great evangelist, Dwight L. Moody. That sermon changed Dr. Grenfell's whole life. He made up his mind that the souls of men needed physicians even more than their ailing bodies, especially forgotten men, dwelling in distant places.

Dr. Grenfell Builds The First Hospital

WHEN he was graduated from Oxford and had completed his medical studies, he took ship and crossed the Atlantic and went to Labrador. He found misery, ignorance, starvation, hopelessness. And then and there he began his life's work—one of the finest achievements to the credit of mankind. He built his first hospital, a humble affair. He established co-operative stores. He married the living and buried the dead. He began to teach the young and the old. He learned to accept as a commonplace the savage minds, the terrible cold, the horror of the white, eternal silence. All of it he endured, smiling eagerly, in order that those primitive people, so like children, could receive his aid.

Dr. Grenfell is 67 now, a frail man, so frail that the light of goodness which burns in his soul glows through his material body and casts about him an aura of saintliness. His steady blue eyes twinkle like the Northern Lights at play. His face is deeply tanned, bronzed by half a lifetime of sun and wind. His hair is white.

But after all these years the world has come to know about the long years of sacrifice. College men and women have joined him in his unselfish service. Four hospitals have been established in Labrador. Industrial and social work has grown. Universities have honored him with degrees. King George has conferred knighthood upon the dauntless soul responsible for it all. Indeed, he should have been made a noble lord, an earl or a duke, if such rewards are any measure of the value of such service. For seldom in the sweep of history does one encounter a nobler spirit.

No peril or hardship ever daunted Sir Wilfred in all those bitter-hard years of his almost hopeless labor in Labrador. For there is steel in the soul of this knight of Christianity.

His Narrow Escape From Ice Floes

IN the blackness of a winter's night, when the winds, sweeping down from the Arctic, cut like a knife and the half-wild sledge dogs were howling at the driving gale, Dr. Grenfell received a call to attend a sick Indian woman. With his dog team he set out over a frozen arm of the sea, making his way through snow and storm toward an Indian village. The wind increased in violence. The ice broke up. Dr. Grenfell and his dogs were caught among the booming, crackling floes, facing almost certain death.

By a desperate effort, he pulled himself out upon a block of ice, after he had been plunged into the freezing water. Then he rescued his dogs, one by one. His clothing froze solidly upon him. He knew that he would certainly freeze to death unless he killed some of the dogs and made their hides serve him as a fur coat against those terrible Arctic blasts.

It was a matter of minutes, not hours; but nevertheless Grenfell hesitated until growing drowsiness warned him of the inevitable. And then, with sadness in his heart he killed three of his faithful dogs, skinned them and wrapped his body with their warm furs. All that night he huddled, bent double, with the remaining dogs grouped closely around him, telling himself that if it was God's will that his life should end so, he was willing to accept the summons.

But with the coming of the morning light there was a shout across the ice. Rescue was at hand. His work was to go on—this man who had looked upon Death and smiled in its face.

JOB WANTED

By Winifred Black

Gladys is surprised, and Gladys is more than a little hurt.

Aunt Vieva has always been so good to Gladys. Why she took her from a farm house up state somewhere and brought her to town and sent her to the best schools.

Wasn't she Vieva's own niece, and would not she be a comfort to Vieva now that Vieva's husband was gone, so for Vieva's sake they must make things pleasant for Gladys.

Vieva is not a rich woman, but she spent a great deal of money on Gladys, she bought her fine frocks and she took her to Europe and showed her the ancient glories of the world.

Gladys seemed to be quite fond of Aunt Vieva, and that was rather odd because so often girls like Gladys are not fond of people who do a great deal for them. And Vieva glowed and shone with affection and confidence and happy triumph.

Her lonely heart was comforted and she loved the youth and the light heart of Gladys, and she dreamed dreams for Gladys.

There was the son of one of her friends, a fine fellow. Intelligent and with a real future before him, but when the son told his mother that Gladys would have nothing to do with him because she was in love with someone else, Vieva made a few inquiries and discovered to her astonishment that Gladys was engaged to a quiet young man who hadn't much to say for himself and who hadn't even a regular job. Never had had, as a matter of fact.

To tell the truth he and Gladys thought that Aunt Vieva was a little selfish—why didn't she stir around and get a job for Clarence.

Clarence didn't care what kind of a job it was so long as Vieva got it for him, and when she did that, he and Gladys could hurry up and be married and get a little flat of their own as far from Vieva as possible. No young husband wants a relatives' union camping on the stairs of even the nicest flat.

Relatives are all right to get you started in life, but after that they ought to mind their own business. Ain't that the truth? says Clarence.

Yes, that's what Clarence says—"ain't" is one of the best words Clarence uses, he just can't bother to think of right words.

And Gladys is really shocked at Aunt Vieva—because she won't do a thing about getting Clarence a job, she won't even lift a finger. Aunt Vieva says Clarence is all right if Gladys likes him, that's her affair. But Aunt Vieva isn't getting jobs for young men who don't seem to want to get jobs for themselves, and as for advancing them a little money so that they can begin to buy furniture and things—nothing like that.

Nothing like that at all.

Poor Vieva, she looks rather lonely and a little unhappy these days, but somehow I am glad she's not going to get Clarence a job.

I think Gladys and Clarence will be a lot better off if Clarence gets his own job—don't you?
